IN THE MAINE WOODS

Here's an Invitation to Come to This Famous Vacation-land for which the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad is the Gateway.

“IN The Maine Woods,” again conveys our invitation to come to this great vacation land for which the Bangor and Aroostook Railroad is the gateway. Again it expresses assurances of a cordial welcome for all.

That the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad serves a vast locality a glance at the map will reveal. From Moosehead Lake, one of the earliest vacation localities in this section of Maine and for more than half a century a foremost attraction, through the Katahdin Iron Works region, past Norcross and the waters abounding thereabouts, on and beyond famous Mt. Katahdin and the country around Patten, far up to the waters comprising the Fish River chain of lakes and streams, and over the New Brunswick boundary, into the Restigouche and other widely renowned Canadian fish and game centers — for all these the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad is the approach.

But it is not only the Maine Woods vacationland for which the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad provides splendid transportation for it is also the quick and easy route to the renowned vacationland, fishing and hunting localities in New Brunswick, just over the border from Maine, and including, among numerous others, the renowned regions of the Restigouche and Metapedia rivers. The Bangor & Aroostook Railroad makes necessary only an overnight trip, with all modern transportation comforts, for arrival at most places in Northern Maine and New Brunswick by noon the next day.

An important service which the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad offers for its patrons and friends and one which has won commendation from many visitors is given by its information bureau maintained in the office of George M. Houghton, General Passenger Agent, Bangor, Maine, which will answer all questions and give expert advice for the benefit of those planning vacations, fishing or hunting, canoeing or mountain-climbing in the Aroostook. This service is of particular value to persons coming for the first time for whom it saves time and trouble and frequently unnecessary expense.

To many persons, particularly new-comers, it is a matter of surprise that despite the constant growth in the number of vacationists coming to the Maine woods and the increasing number of hotels and modernly equipped "camps" the early charm and unique features of a woods outing are still to be enjoyed. The Maine woods "camp" continues to hold its unique place and while the Aroostook country takes pride in the fine hotels like the new Mt. Kinco House and Squaw Mountain Inn at Moosehead, it is the Maine woods camps that make this vacationland so distinctive.

Camps generally are located on the shore of or close by lakes or rivers, some distance from settlements and are in themselves little communities. Supplies are kept stocked and many camps have gardens for vegetables and provide their own dairy products, eggs and poultry. The central cabin is used for a common dining-room and assembly, and then apart are series of smaller cabins. These individual cabins may have two or four apartments for sleeping, and in addition a little sitting room with an open fire. The camp plan followed in the Maine woods has many advantages. The individual cabins provide privacy for families and parties and give seclusion and coziness that make them distinctive and give a complete change from hotel life.

A Maine woods camp offers a continuous program of pleasure and contentment, with the round of fishing parties, tramping expeditions, canoeing, picnics and many other forms of entertainment. The general excellence of these "camps" has contributed largely in putting the Aroostook country in the premier position which it holds among vacation centers. The health-giving benefits of a vacation in the Maine woods cannot be over-emphasized, particularly the fact that here is one place where sufferers find immediate relief from hay fever.

The most convincing evidence of the satisfaction of a Maine woods vacation is the yearly increase in the number of visitors. All the old-time favorite resorts retain their popularity and there are numerous newer sections that are fast winning favor, such as the up-north Aroostook waters, known as the Fish River Waters and consisting of Eagle and Square lakes and other waters which have become in recent years widely famous. Moosehead Lake, the Katahdin Iron Works country, the Mt. Katahdin region — all among the earliest favorites — still attract their thousands of devotees.

Come for fishing, canoeing, mountain-climbing, hunting and you will find a woods vacation in the Aroostook country, whichever locality you select, the best of all vacations.

Again, remember that the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad's information bureau is ready to serve you in any way possible to make plans that will assure you of the best vacation you have ever had. Come the first time, and you, too, will be an enthusiastic devotee of the Maine woods.

GOING CAMPING! ..HERE'S SOME GOOD ADVICE

An Experienced Maine Woods Devotee Offers Suggestions to Help Make Successful Vacations.

By DR. CHARLES M. WHITNEY, Boston

ANYONE wishing to go for a vacation into the North Woods may select any one of the many comfortable camps in Maine or he may take a tenting trip, according to his preference and the time he can spend. With the latter method this article is especially concerned. If one goes to a camp, he finds excellent quarters in a log house with comfortable beds and a good camp dining room. From here he can make daily trips by canoe, or on foot, and fish or hunt as he pleases. But the sportsman who likes frequent changes of scenes, with long canoe trips down rivers and across lakes with a little spice of adventure thrown in for good measure, will never be quite satisfied until he has taken a tenting trip.

In order to obtain the greatest amount of pleasure from such a trip, it is advisable to know in advance what conditions will be met with and how to prepare for them. The suggestions which follow are not intended for the experienced sportsman, for he knows all about the woods, but rather as an aid to those who are taking such a trip for the first time.

In a general way, it may be said that a combined river and lake trip that ends at a different section of the country from the start is most satisfactory. Competent guides are always needed and selecting them depends upon the kind of trip which is planned. For example, a guide may be a skillful man in a canoe on a lake, but useless in quick strong water where a pole is used. Again, a guide who has always worked from a camp may not understand how to cook or make a comfortable camp in the woods. The safest man to get is an all-round guide who has made river trips and understands just how to make a sportsman comfortable when away from the base of supplies. There are many splendid chaps who can do just this and they are most delightful and interesting companions. Finding a cook who can handle a canoe in all waters in addition to his other duties is becoming more and more difficult each year.

The Type of Tent Recommended by Dr. Whitney

Having decided upon the locality and engaged the guides, the proper equipment to be taken must be considered. Each guide furnishes a canoe, tent, blankets and "cooking tools." The sportsman must provide the tent and bedding for his own use and these may be hired or purchased outright. If future trips are planned, it is wise to own the equipment. On this basis it is best to buy a waterproof-parafined tent of standard size, and if the trip is to be made in June or July, it should have a bobbinet fly screen which can be let down at night. This keeps out the flies and mosquitoes. All-wool blankets are needed and a large rubber blanket or poncho is essential. At night this is spread on the ground to keep out the dampness and the bough bed is placed above it; when traveling to new camping grounds, it is used to cover the bedding to keep it dry in case of rain. A folding camp chair does not take up much room and is very useful.

If the trip covers many miles, a rubber canoe cushion is of value for it takes up no room when it is deflated. Clothing should be selected to conform to three essentials: warmth, simplicity and comfort. An old suit of clothes is just the thing to take along for then it does not matter what happens to it. A few suggestions based upon many years experience in the woods may be of service. The following articles will be found practical and useful: Light woolen undergarments; 3 pairs of wool socks; 2 flannel shirts of medium weight; 2 pairs of old trousers; vest; mackinaw; old soft hat or cap; light rain coat which can be folded in a small package; sweater; pair of mocassins, watertight and ten or eleven inches high; sneakers; colored handkerchief; cotton gloves; colored glasses for protection against the bright sun on long water trips; waterproof match safe; compass.

It may occasion some surprise because so much emphasis is placed upon warmth in clothing and blankets when a trip is made in the summer months. The reason for this is the coolness of the nights, for the temperature drops quickly when the sun goes down and a fire is very comfortable even when it has been hot during the day. The outfit should be packed in a waterproof duffle bag and is thus protected from rain when traveling.

If a trip is made in June or July, protection from mosquitoes and black flies must be provided. In the woods country, everywhere, there are mosquitoes, black flies and gnats, called locally in various places, "minges", "no see 'ems" and sand flies. The black flies are busy during the day only, which is a blessing, while the mosquitoes apparently work in night shifts, for they are always on the job. The minges are day and night workers and on hot, still nights can make life miserable. The guides call them "little hot feet". It is most satisfactory to be able to state that a little precaution will save one from the great discomfort which would otherwise result. Some form of fly "dope" should be used and while there may be others of equal value, I have, personally, found that "Wood's Lollacapop" is most effective. This is a firm paste apparently composed of tar and camphor with a base of mutton tallow and bees wax, enclosed in a tin box of convenient size for the pocket, and may be used freely without any irritation to the skin. The various modern protective sprays, of which "Flytox" or "Flit" are typical, are the best of all. By using a spray in the tent or even in the open air, all flies are at once killed or driven off. To protect the ankles from bites, the trouser legs should be tucked into the tops of the moccasins. After the first of August the black flies disappear and there is very little trouble to be expected from any other insects.

In selecting the food to be taken on a tenting trip or "making up the grub list", as it is called, nothing must be forgotten, for when one is thirty or forty miles in the woods it is a poor time to discover that the salt or sugar has been overlooked. After many trips the following list has been found to contain all the essentials:

Potatoes	Tomato Catsup	Lemon Extract
Flour	Ginger	Vanilla Extract
Butter	Dry Mustard	6 Cans Grapefruit
Eggs	Beans — yellow eye	6 Pkgs. Mrs. Simonson's
Lard	Rice	Lemon Pie Filling
Onions	Corn Meal	Canned Baked Beans
Molasses	Maple Syrup	Canned Tomatoes
Sugar	Bacon	Canned Corn
Salt	Ham	Dried Prunes
Baking Powder	Pork	Dried Apples
Soda	Rolled Oats	Dried Peaches
Cream of Tartar	Coffee	Split Peas
Magic Yeast	Tea	Soap
Pepper	Boned Codfish	Matches
Raisins	Cheese	Flytox or Flit and
Macaroni	Olives	Sprayer
Buckwheat Flour	Chow Chow	Assorted Nails

All supplies should be purchased locally and packed in small boxes. The contents of each box should be marked on the outside. The length of the trip and the number in the party must be considered in estimating the amount of food required. In general, canned preserves are to be avoided for they are not needed and increase the load. They are replaced by the dried fruits which are light and nutritious. There are two important articles of food which are perishable and these are butter and eggs. They will keep very well for two weeks but after that the butter may become rancid and the eggs stale. Fortunately all this can be easily prevented. "Gold Seal" brand of butter is marketed by James Rowlands & Company of New York in one or two pound cans and this will keep indefinitely in any weather. The quality is invariably excellent and it is fine to have a supply of fresh sweet butter always on hand. Eighteen years' use of this product has only increased my enthusiasm regarding it. To keep eggs fresh enough to boil for breakfast for three or four weeks, is something of a problem, but I was helped to a solution of it by some good advice from one of my New Brunswick guides.

This is the way it is done: In the bottom of an egg case or any wooden box, spread two or three inches of fine salt. Place in it a layer of eggs on end until the space is filled and cover them with another thick layer of salt. Continue with alternate layers of eggs and salt until the box is filled. The salt absorbs moisture and forms a compact mass which preserves the eggs and makes transportation safer. They are good for breakfast for four or five weeks and for cooking a couple of weeks longer.

For those who imagine that it is necessary to "rough it", in the woods and to live on rather coarse food, I should like to present a list of food which Allie Outhouse cooked for us at various times a year ago. All these were made from the list already mentioned.

Bacon — fried and boiled	Flapjacks and maple syrup
Ham — boiled and fried	Boiled Rice with raisins
Eggs — boiled, fried and scrambled	Baked Beans
Potatoes — boiled, fried and mashed	Johnny Cake
Raised Bread — toast	Macaroni and cheese
Cream of tartar biscuits	Wild Strawberry Shortcake
Graham Bread	Soups — tomato bisque, bean, pea
Ginger Bread	Stewed tomato and corn
Ginger Snaps	Sauces — pear, grapefruit, apple,
Sugar Cookies	peach and prune
Doughnuts	Cereals
Frosted Cup Cakes	Tea and coffee
Lemon Pie	Codfish and cream
Apple Pie	Fishballs
Raisin Pie	Trout — fried, broiled and chowder
Sugar Cake

Camping grounds are selected which are near a spring from which cool drinking water may be obtained. At least two hours should be allowed to make a comfortable camp. The dunnage is unloaded from the canoes and carried to the camp ground which must be cleared for the tents and outfit.

The tent poles are cut and the tents pitched and fastened firmly by guy ropes. Four small logs are cut as a frame for the bed and held in place by stakes. The guides now go into the woods for the fir boughs from which the bed is made. This takes time in any case, but more if the nearby fir has been picked by previous parties. The guide takes the boughs and begins at the top in making the bed, placing them in layers with the large ends up until the bough bed is a foot thick. On this is placed the rubber blanket and the rest of the bedding. This is soft and resilient but must be renewed every three days. When remaining in one place for a week or more, a very good bed can be made by taking eight or ten-inch logs for the head and foot and tacking on them slender poles on which the boughs are placed. This is very elastic and comfortable and does not require frequent renewal.

An Important Feature of the Camper's Outfit

If something extra special is desired, the guides can make a fire-place in front of the sportman's tent and provide birch bark, dry and hard wood, to keep it going. This is the last word in comfort and is mighty nice on cool nights. The dining fly is pitched, the table is set up and all supplies are placed under canvas.

One never ceases to admire the skill of the guide that can cook a wonderful meal by a simple open fire. It is most interesting to watch him prepare his cooking plant. The ground is cleared and large rocks are brought from the shore and placed at the sides; on these are placed the forelog and backlog. A fire frame is made with two uprights and a cross piece from which are suspended the hangers made from hay wire or wood. The tin baker, without which no cook could work, is placed in front of the forelog, the pails are filled with water, put on to boil and all is in readiness for the next step.

He gets out his breadboard and in no time at all has mixed his biscuit or Johnny cake and they are in the baker. With equal speed he prepares the rest of the meal for his hungry guests and before you know it, supper is ready and everybody is happy. If you give one of these woods cooks time enough in one place, he will make the finest raised bread you ever tasted, all cooked in a baker before an open fire.

Seated around the glowing camp fire, we watch the shadows slowly deepen until darkness comes and a wonderful sensation of drowsiness steals over us. We go to our tents, tumble into our soft fragrant beds, and sleep soundly until the bright morning sun awakens us to a realization that we have ahead of us another glorious day in these big wonderful woods.

Regardless of where we go in Maine, the moment we leave the train or automobile, there comes over us a wonderful sense of rest and all cares are left behind. Under bright blue skies, we look upon the green velvet carpet of trees while the sun shines brightly upon us, and we forget the life of the city with its constant hurry and strain, and relax in perfect contentment.

MOOSEHEAD LAKE..A LONG- FAMOUS VACATION SPOT

One of the Earliest Attractions of the Maine Woods and Still a First Favorite..

BY CHIEF HENRY RED EAGLE

OF all the hundreds of popular resorts reached by the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad, Moosehead Lake is undoubtedly the best known to vacationists. For hundreds — perhaps thousands — of years, this famous Lake has been a magnet that has attracted men and women to its shores.

As a boy, I would sit for hours in the wigwam of my old grandmother, Malie Tomah, who was conceded to be the oldest inhabitant of the section, as, in the lilting music of our native tongue, she related how our forefathers and their contemporary tribes, journeyed along the waterways and trails of the woods, for days and weeks, in order to reach the big se'bem; on the shores of which rested the famed mountain, whose geologic formation of felsitic rhyolite made the best arrowheads, spearheads and tomahawks. A se'bem so wide that the keenest eye could not see the opposite shore at its widest point; whose waters fostered huge, fighting muskalonge, na'macq and pa'lum (lakers, trout and salmon) and whose shores abounded with deer, moose, caribou and bear.

Fame of this magnificent body of water spread and, later came the white men from the south, first afoot, then by horse-drawn stages; in a journey fraught with danger and hardship.

Building a Log Cabin on the Shore of Moosehead Lake

This condition continued until June, 1884, when the Bangor & Piscataquis Railroad, now the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad, completed laying its rails between Bangor and Greenville. The present equipment of all steel coaches of the Bangor & Aroostook system, with their luxurious appointments, that provides the maximum in travel comfort for its passengers, is a far cry from that of the unwieldy vehicles that jounced over the rough corduroy roads — scarcely more than blazed trails — through beast infested woods, less than half a century ago.

Where, in the early days, a single, primitive tavern housed the doughty sportsman, who braved the discomforts for a few days of hunting, fishing and camping about the lake, today its shores are dotted with fine hotels and sporting camps, which offer every form of outdoor attraction and comfort for their guests. Private camps, owned by nationally known figures, occupy well-ordered grounds of vantage overlooking the clear waters and, in the years of its fame, Moosehead has been visited by thousands and thousands of sport lovers from European royalty to the humble lumberjack.

Situated one thousand feet above sea level, like some huge gem among hundreds of lesser stones, Moosehead stands pre-eminently as the great mother of Maine's lakes.

The Bangor & Aroostook trains run to the shores of the lake at Greenville Junction to within fifty feet of the wharf of the Coburn Steamboat Co., whose fleet of well appointed boats that will take the visitor to every place of interest. The lake's area of 117 square miles, offers exceptional opportunities for delightful excursions to different points, where one may spend a day or two to good advantage. From the decks of these modern craft one can appreciate the natural beauty of this great inland sea to the utmost. Far and away, as far as the eye can reach, spreads the unbroken forest; a great expanse of deep wood, piled tier on tier — forever like huge waves caught and held in suspension as with some giant hand. In their depths, one can visualize the horde of wild game that infests the trails; the shy doe with her fawn; the lordly moose, as he stalks in regal state along the banks of a purling stream, and the surly bear as he shambles awkwardly in quest of prey. The hundreds of spring-fed brooks and streams teem with trout and salmon — while over all spreads that pall of silence that brings surcease to jumpy nerves beget of business worries and the clamor of the city.

An Old-Time Indian Encampment at Moosehead Lake — Mt. Kineo in the Background

The horizon is a broken edge of high flung mountains and ridges that completely surround the lake. Off to the east, Katahdin, King of Maine's mountain peaks, rears its lofty dome, 5,265 feet. From the west, nearby, Squaw mountain, with its fire station crowning its topmost ledge, frowns down upon the shores; as though defying the mountain climber. A good road fringes its very base, from which branches a well defined trail that leads to the top, and allows an excellent view of the surrounding country for a radius of fifty miles.

Twenty miles above, lie Big and Little Spencer Mountains with their mound-like tops, which, Indian legend has it, are the inverted kettles of a great Indian hunter. Bald, Boarstone, Elephant, Blue Ridge and the Lily Bay range loom to the east, west and south; but, perhaps, the most magnificent of all, is Kineo, that stands alone, halfway up the lake. Rising abruptly from the waters it stands like a grim sentinel to overlook the entire region. Its very appearance breathes of romance, history and tragedy. Who knows of the fierce battles that may have been waged in its shadows in the days of tribal warfare when rival redmen came to gather the green flint to make their implements of war? Of the romantic meetings of lovers in days ago? Of the tragedies that led suicides to leap from her cliffs to the crags below? Algonquin history is rich with legends of Kineo!

And no trip up the lake is complete unless your boat has rounded the mountain into North Bay and eased its prow into the shadows of the cliff that overhangs the deep pool at its foot, a pool that, as yet, has to be plumbed by man. Rising a sheer 300 feet, the massive wall of green flint protrudes like the undershot jaw of a great bulldog, to dwarf the dimensions of the boat to that of a toy. In the shadow of this wonderful caprice of Nature, a gradual feeling of awe inspires one, like that of entering a huge crypt — a feeling of deep oppression. The echoing blast of the steamer's whistle, from the immense wall of rock, is like the call of doom and smites the ear with deafening force; and it is almost with a sigh of relief that you see the steamer back out from the huge menace of hanging rock, into the clear waters of the bay. Kineo Cliff is majestic, stupendous!

At the head of the lake; which is 40 miles long; lies North East Carry and, two miles away, the famed West Branch of the Penobscot, formerly the putting-in place for canoe trips into the north, among which the Allagash was — and still remains — the premier cruise for sportsmen. For almost 200 miles the canoe glides along the rivers and lakes through a wild country, where scarcely a sign of civilization obtrudes, from the time you shove off until the nose of the craft is grounded at Fort Kent. Here, the far reaching service of the Bangor & Aroostook system identifies itself with the sportsman's needs and brings him back to his starting point at Greenville.

In the western arm at the head of the lake, is North West Carry, better known as Seboomook, now the starting point for the Allagash and West Branch canoe trips and also for the North Branch of the Penobscot by which he may journey into the wilds of Canada, or branch off down the St. John river until, again he can take advantage of the Bangor & Aroostook's network of steel, to bring him back to Moosehead's shores.

Camping sites are numerous, hotels and sporting camps are many and a different point of interest may be visited daily for weeks without a repeat. Lily, Spencer, North and Squaw Bays; Deer, Moose and Sugar Islands; East and West Outlets; Tomhegan, Socatean, Spencer and William streams; Roach and Moose Rivers; Brassua, Roach, Spencer, Indian, Fitzgerald, Wilson and countless minor ponds, as well as some 50 trout streams — all within easy reach of the lake — are magnets that appeal to the fishermen.

Almost without exception, the whole country abounds with wild game; deer, moose, bear, partridge, rabbits and fur-bearing animals. Most of the sporting camps cater to hunting parties, as well as fishermen and vacationists; and capable guides are always available. The advertising pages of their book list camps, about the lake, and their rates.

Moosehead Lake is also the sesame to the country beyond. From Rockwood, directly across from Kineo, many points of interest may be visited. A few years ago, the Great Northern Paper Co., built a road through the woods in order to freight in their supplies and by it, one may motor into Canada, or through Seboomook to Russell Stream and Caucomgomoc Lake.

From Greenville, again by way of the Great Northern roads, an almost illimitable expanse of hunting and fishing country is open to the north, leading into the Katahdin, Chesuncook and Allagash waters, with numerous camps, en route, that serve the tourist and sportsman.

Fringing the western shore of the lake, a six-mile road leads to the State Hatchery at Squaw Brook. Here in the breeding pools, one may see the various stages of development of the fish from the embryo to that of a twelve-inch salmon. Last year, new breeding pools were erected at Lily Bay, to more than double the capacity of fingerlings and today, Moosehead Lake boasts one of the largest and best equipped hatcheries in the east. Each fall, thousands of young trout and salmon are shipped to various points about the lake and to surrounding ponds and dumped — to emerge eventually, as a worthy foe to some devotee of the light bamboo.

FAMOUS CANOE TRIPS THRU MAINE WOODS WATERWAYS

*The Allagash Cruise and the Other Excursions
Over Forest, Lakes and Rivers.*

OF all the vacation attractions offered by the vast region for which the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad is the entrance, there is none surpasses in popularity the celebrated canoe trips through the waterways of the Maine woods. These canoe trips through the forest, lakes and streams have been one of the biggest factors in establishing the fame of Maine as the nation's great vacation center. Many times has it been pointed out that in all the variety of vacation attractions offered by the Aroostook country none excels a canoe trip in providing opportunity for enjoying not only the zest of paddling through forest waterways but also for camping out, fishing for trout for the meals en route, an occasional tramp and even a day or two on land for mountain climbing.

The Allagash trip is regarded as the premier canoe cruise, but the Aroostook country offers also the West Branch, the St. John River trip and numerous shorter trips like those provided by the Fish River Chain of lakes and streams in the far north Aroostook country. Canoe cruises are equally popular with women and men and during the vacation season there are dozens of parties of boys and girls, many of them from Summer schools and camps, for whom the annual canoe cruise is the chief attraction of the summer program.

Whether it is the Allagash, the popular West Branch trip, the voyage down the Penobscot's East Branch, the long journey through the St. John River waters or some of the many shorter cruises, there are many opportunities for camping, tramping or fishing and in the fall for hunting. The East and West Branch trips give a chance for climbing Mt. Katahdin.

The Aroostook country's four top-line canoe trips are: Allagash trip, 210 miles; West Branch trip, 30 miles; East Branch trip, 118 miles; St. John trip, 231 miles.

The Allagash is the most famous of all the forest voyages through the picturesque waterways of the Bangor & Aroostook country. It begins at Northwest Carry, on the Penobscot's West Branch and ends at Fort Kent on the St. John River, 200 miles distant.

There is almost an unbroken stretch of fine scenery and the many opportunities for fishing in the lakes and streams make the Allagash trip exceptional. Northwest Carry, the starting point for the Allagash trip, is reached by the way of Moosehead Lake, being one of Moosehead's extremities. From the steamboat wharf, canoe parties are conveyed overland to the deadwater below Seboomook dam when the canoes go into the West Branch for a dash of 25 miles to Chesuncook Lake.

If the start is made in the afternoon, a popular camping spot is the "Half-way House," a little more than 10 miles from Northwest Carry. In the second 10-mile course, Moosehead, Ragmuff and Pine streams are passed, and then the canoe enters Chesuncook Lake at the head of which is Umbazooksus Lake. A carry of a couple of miles is reached after a mile paddle over the lake and at the carry the canoes are carried overland by teams to Mud Pond and then there is a mile stretch down the outlet to Chamberlain Lake. Around the dam there is another short carry and then the canoe goes into the stream for a run to Eagle Lake. It is 12 miles over Eagle Lake to the thoroughfares of 2 miles connecting Eagle and Churchill Lakes. Churchill Lake is five miles long and at its foot is Chase Carry, about a mile in length, and the canoe enters the Allagash River for ten miles to Umsaskis Lake.

Five miles over Umsaskis Lake and a thoroughfare is reached which leads into Long Lake, and then there is another five-mile stretch to the Allagash River, after which it is a course of ten miles, bringing up at Round Pond. Two miles over the pond and there is another entry into the Allagash for a fifteen-mile dash to Allagash Falls. At the Falls, the canoe is taken out for a short carry and it goes into the river below the Falls. From the Falls it is direct, going with some strong rapids at St. Francis. The Allagash and the St. John unite twelve miles above St. Francis.

The usual terminus of the Allagash trip is St. Francis but frequently it is continued down the St. John River to Fort Kent. At St. Francis the Bangor & Aroostook train may be taken to Fort Kent, and thence to Bangor or to other points. There is also railroad connection between Fort Kent and Van Buren, and the trip is interesting as it skirts the borderline and follows closely the banks of the St. John River.

These towns on both sides of the St. John River have unusual interest for many visitors as they are inhabited largely by French-speaking people who are descendants of the early Acadian settlers who sought refuge following their expulsion from what is now Nova Scotia. The Grand Falls of the St. John River widely known as "the Niagara of the East," are only a dozen miles from Van Buren and well worth seeing.

In making the Allagash trip it is customary to take tent, provisions, cooking utensils and other necessities and then go into camp whenever night or the inclination to get ashore overtakes the canoeist. There are numerous good camping places with clear springs for drinking water, and surroundings that are inviting and there are various camps along the Allagash where provisions may be secured if the supply is running low. If desired, meals and lodgings may be had at these camps. They are:

H. M. Bickford's camps at the head of Chesuncook Lake where supplies are furnished.

J. T. Michaud's farm, about two miles before reaching the Allagash Falls.

What does a canoe trip cost? The expense depends entirely upon the person. Some people will make the trip with considerable economy, while others will go over the same trip regardless of expense. It is not advisable to take more than one person in a canoe, in fact most guides decline to do so. A guide's charge for one person is $6.00 to $7.00 a day. The canoe, tent, and cooking utensils are supplied by the guide. If a single guide is taken along with two persons, his charge will probably be $8.00 a day and board. In arranging for supplies, information and details can be secured from D. T. Sanders & Son Co., Greenville, for many years outfitters for canoe parties and who always give satisfaction.

The latter part of July to the last of September is the popular time for a Maine woods cruise. Insects are not troublesome then.

The map of canoe routes in Maine's great north country, reached by the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad and a convenient table of estimated distances of canoe trips in the Bangor and Aroostook Territory appearing on pages 42 and 43 give detailed information regarding distances, etc., of the Allagash, West Branch, East Branch, St. John River and other canoe trips.

JUMPING TROUT IN THE SOURDNAHUNK

YOU know very well that brook trout do not jump. Often a big one will swash around on the surface when hooked, and then you should give him plenty of slack, at the same time waving your hat or making some other gesture to drive him below, where he cannot hit a taut line with his threshing tail; but you may fish a whole lifetime without seeing a brook trout leap clear of the water, as a salmon leaps, or a rainbow trout, or a steelhead. Though my line has been wet in many waters from the subarctic of Canada to the suburbs of New York, only in one small pool and at one short hour have I known a brook trout to go into the air when he felt the pull of a fly rod.

This rare exception occurred on a deadwater of the Penobscot, a couple of miles above the old Sourdnahunk dam. It was a most difficult place for a fly rod, a back cast being impossible. The only effective method was to take the fly in one hand and snap it out by pulling the rod into a bow. Even so, my Parmacheenee Belle had barely touched the water before a three-pound trout rose to it. He was landed, after an unruly fashion, with two more; and I quit fishing, having enough for one day, while the fish were still in a rising mood. The astonishing thing was that every one of these trout jumped two or three times like a salmon. The largest, which I did not land, rose from under a stub that projected over the pool some eighteen or twenty inches above the surface. When struck he went to the bottom and was with difficulty held from his lair among the roots; then up he flashed and leaped clear over the stub, breaking my leader as his weight fell upon it.

Another day I took a few more fish from the same pool; but they did not jump, nor have I ever again seen a brook trout go into the air at the end of a fishing line.

How do I account for the four that did jump? Used as you are to dream books which magnify the wisdom or wariness of big trout and the skill required to catch them, you will smile at the natural explanation as too simple — that a fish does not jump to shake out your hook, as the authorities all tell you, for the sufficient reason that he knows nothing about hooks and has no possible way of knowing. He jumps from an unthinking impulse, probably instinctive or hereditary, to get out of the water and let a pursuing enemy pass under him; and he slats his head or violently wriggles his body for no better or worse reason than you vainly shake your hand when a finger is hurt or vainly thresh your arms when bees are buzzing about your head. Thus, one has frequently seen salmon jumping to escape a seal in tidewater, or pickerel jumping to escape a mink, or minnows jumping to escape a loon or a shell-drake or some other bird that does his fishing under water. I think, therefore, that on a certain lucky day I came to a pool soon after an otter had harried it. His pursuit had awakened some old, half-forgotten instinct in the trout, and they jumped as from a natural enemy when they felt the pull of my artificial rod.

You are probably thinking now that you have seen a salmon jump from his pool, where certainly there was no seal to trouble him. So you have. If you will admit the correction, however, he jumped not from his pool but from the stillwater below; and you may have seen him when he was in sportive mood, or when his eye caught the shadow of a passing insect that was too small or too distant for human eyes to see. I shall, therefore, listen with wideawake ears when you tell me why certain brook trout jumped for me, contrary to rule — wide-awake, that is, if you do not quote the astrological notion of some honored authority, which will make me as drowsy as The Compleat Angler after a day's fishing. — Harper's Magazine.

FISHING WITH A WORM

IF all men are by nature either Platonists or Aristotelians, fly-fishermen or worm-fishermen, how difficult it is for us to do one another justice; Differing in mind, in aim and method, how shall we say infallibly that this man or that is wrong? To fail with Plato for companion may be better than to succeed with Aristotle. But one thing is perfectly clear; there is no warrant for Compromise but Success. Use a worm if you will, but you must have fish to show for it, if you would escape the finger of scorn. If you find yourself camping by an unknown brook, and are deputed to catch the necessary trout for breakfast, it is wiser to choose the surest bait. The crackle of the fish in the frying-pan will alone for any theoretical defect in your method. But to choose the surest bait, and then to bring back no fish, is unforgiveable. Forsake Plato if you must, but you may do so only at the price of justifying yourself in the terms of Aristotelian arithmetic. The college president who abandoned his college in order to run a cotton mill was free to make his own choice of calling; but he was never pardoned for bankrupting the mill. If one is bound to be a low man rather than an impractical idealist, he should at least make sure of his vulgar success.

Is all this but a disguised defense of pot-hunting? No. There is no possible defense of pot-hunting, whether it be upon a trout brook or in the stock market. Against fish or men, one should play the game fairly. Yet for that matter some of the most skillful fly-fishermen I have known were pot-hunters at heart, and some of the most prosaic-looking merchants were idealists compared to whom Shelley was but a dreaming boy. All depends upon the spirit with which one makes his venture. — Fishing with a Worm — Perry.

THE MAINE WOODS FOR FINEST FISHING

Hundreds of Lakes and Streams Attract the Anglers to the Aroostook Country.

THE fishing waters of the Aroostook country — the joy of thousands of anglers who annually get their prizes from the lakes and streams so numerous in this vacationland — have been one of the chiefest factors in making this great section of the State of Maine the prime favorite that it is. Wherever you go, in the Aroostook country, fishing opportunities will be found. That this is literally the case is emphasized by a glance at the map, covered with its network of rivers, streams and lakes, great and small.

An unique and important feature which Aroostook holds out to the fisherman is the continuous sport from early spring, right through the summer until late in September. This is especially the case with the Fish River Chain of Waters which comprise many lakes and streams far up in the northerly peak of Maine. The good summer fishing which brings no end of favorable comment, particularly from anglers who have been disappointed in waters outside of Maine, is explained by the fact that many of the lakes besides being spring-fed are of considerable altitude which means cool water despite the thermometer's high temperature.

In the Aroostook country as is the case the world over, the royal salmon is the prize supreme for all fishermen. The salmon is proclaimed the king of all fish, and the Maine salmon is without peer. There are also togue, black bass, perch and pickerel and dozens of Maine waters are celebrated for their trout. In not a few waters white perch, pickerel and black bass offer sport scarcely less exhilarating than is provided by the aristocrat salmon and trout.

The fishing season in the Aroostook country begins with the departure of the ice from lakes and ponds. Fly-fishing continues at its best until summer weather, and in many localities, as has been pointed out, even the warmest days find the water sufficiently cool to make good sport. As summer progresses and nights become cooler there is fine fly-fishing generally. More and more anglers are enjoying the fall sport, which, in the Aroostook waters is comparable with the spring fishing. Whatever the choice of season the Bangor & Aroostook country offers supreme attractions for the angler. Not only is fishing in the Aroostook country the finest of sport but along with this enjoyment, the angler finds abundant opportunity for other diversions — camping, tramping, mountain-climbing and canoeing — a vacation program that cannot be surpassed.

Moosehead Lake, because of its size, its scenic beauties, and its magnificent fish, was one of the earliest favorites and despite the many newer fishing waters holds its leadership among Maine's thousands of fishing waters. Other long-time favorites in the Aroostook country are Sebec Lake, the waters in the Katahdin Iron Works region, the lakes and streams in the shadow of Mt. Katahdin, all of which are as popular as they have been for many years.

Recent years have seen many other waters come into favor as has the Fish River Chain which yearly contribute new records to enhance the renown and popularity of this great fishing country. The angler is offered many advantages by the Aroostook country — size of fish, length of season, coolness of waters, even in mid-summer and the fine sport in catching the big and gamy trout and salmon which have made this the most famous of all fishing sections.

Information regarding fishing waters and when and where favorable conditions prevail may be obtained from the Bangor & Aroostook's vacation bureau and this service will be found useful whether you are a new comer attracted by the fame of the Aroostook fishing waters and the reports of splendid sport by fellow anglers who already know Aroostook or whether you are a veteran seeking a change to new waters.

UP-NORTH WATERS — THE FISH RIVER CHAIN

Among the newer fish and game sections which have been made accessible to many sportsmen by the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad is the Fish River Chain which comprises a group of up-north lakes and streams not far from the Canadian boundary. Hundreds of fishermen — and hunters, too — will give testimony to the splendid sport offered by this locality.

In the Fish River Chain are eight large lakes, and rivers varying in length from one-half to eight miles long, which connect them, giving the sportsman a total canoeing distance of about 100 miles before reaching Fort Kent, at the mouth of Fish River. Included in the chain are, on the North Branch, Long Lake, Salmon Lake (sometimes times called Mud Lake), Cross Lake, Square Lake and Eagle Lake; on the Main Fish River Branch, St. Froid Lake, Portage Lake and Big Fish Lake. Square Lake, is about the center of the chain. All the lakes in Fish River Chain have salmon, trout and togue.

Long Lake is the largest of the Fish River Chain, being twenty miles long and about six miles wide. From Long Lake, Salmon Lake is reached through a short river, one-half mile in length. This lake is the smallest of the Fish River Chain, being only three miles long. Its shores are wooded all around and there is good fishing for salmon. Another short river two and one-half miles long, bridged by the short state highway between Caribou and Fort Kent, leads into Cross Lake, which is eight miles long. From the foot of Cross Lake is a thoroughfare one-half mile long which flows into Square Lake which is justly famous for big catches.

In Eagle, Square and most of the other waters of the Fish River Chain, the fishing is good from the time the ice breaks up until about July first, the salmon running from two and one-half to ten pounds. The main Fish River starts at Big Fish Lake; Fish Lake being the upper Lake; there are numbers of brooks, with small ponds and lakes coming into Fish Lake. Fish Lake is about five miles long, and is studded with small islands on one of which are Zella Isle camps which are picturesquely situated, surrounded by beautiful scenery, and from which some good fishing may be had.

A mile or so from Fish Lake is Round Pond, well named as it is nearly circular, being about one mile each way. The fisherman will find great sport at Round Pond. At the foot of the pond there are falls, about twenty feet in height. From the falls to Portage Lake, fourteen miles, the river will furnish lots of thrills, as there is some very quick water, and the canoeist must always be on the alert. Portage Lake, about eight miles long and from three and one-half to four miles wide, is one of the best known waters in the Fish River Chain. From Portage to St. Froid Lake, eight miles, the river winds in and out, with some beautiful bits of scenery around each bend.

St. Froid Lake, nine miles long, has several rivers flowing into it, one of which, Red River, is fed by some twenty-eight ponds and streams. Birch River also flows into St. Froid and it has a number of ponds on its head waters. From St. Froid to Eagle Lake a river two and one-half miles long, runs between high banks all the way and offers good fishing. Eagle Lake, one of the largest of the Fish River Chain, is noted for its salmon fishing.

Fish River waters are decidedly "in the woods," and hardly more than a dozen miles from the tip end of Maine but they are among the most accessible fishing, hunting and vacation spots in the state, being only sixteen hours by rail from Boston with through Pullman and dining car service. Auto and power boats meet trains. No locality in the great Aroostook country offers vacation pleasures in larger measure or variety than does this Fish River region.

The Fishermen About Whom Dr. Carl A. Spaulding Tells

FISHING IN UP-NORTH AROOSTOOK WATERS

This is a Story of One Party's Success in Waters Which are Famous for Fine Catches.

By DR. CARL A. SPAULDING, Houlton, Me.

FRIDAY afternoon, May 29, 1931, found Walter, Charlie and Teddie headed north to Aroostook. Saturday morning at Smyrna Mills, they met their old friend Miller and with him was the writer, a guide. A short ride from Smyrna Mills found them at some beautifully located camps overlooking a great valley with Mt. Katahdin in the distance. A quick change of clothes and we were on our way to the lake. The fish in this lake seemed to be on a strike and the boys did not believe there were any. Only a week before the writer had taken ten in one morning and they were large ones. They wanted fish and big ones, too, so it was get them or bust.

Late Sunday afternoon found us on the trail for Mud Lake by way of Rockabema Lake. Rockabema is only a short walk from where we left the car. Here we found Mr. Colburn's fine camps and soon made up our minds to spend the first night there. One of the boys decided to try his luck on the lake and was rewarded by a fine catch of salmon.

Monday morning we were off bright and early on the Mud Lake trail, a walk of about an hour. On our arrival at Mud Lake we at once started fishing. Miller and Teddie went in one canoe and Walter, Charlie and myself in the other. Walter and Charlie both got a strike at the same time. Walter landed his O. K., but Charlie lost a nice large trout. He said he would cry if he only had the tears. Lucky we were not on the salt water.

Chimney Pond, Mt. Katahdin

Soon after dinner Charlie got another strike and for the next half hour we all wondered what he had hooked on to, as that darned fish thought the bottom was the safest place for him. The battle was on; fish on the bottom, Charlie on top. Charlie got a lot of good advice about how to land his fish. However, he thought he could do better with less and he landed his fish just an hour and ten minutes after he got the strike. It was a beautiful fish, a square-tail trout that would weigh four pounds, if it would weigh an ounce. Right away Charlie was ready to pack up and go back to the city to show that fine fish to his friends. Who would blame him? After some talk we made him say he would stay another day and give the rest a chance.

The next morning, Walter got one exactly the same size. He did not seem to have nearly the fight and was easily landed. One reason may have been, that Charlie's fish had been hooked a few days before and had got away with hook, line and sinker. We found a hook still in his mouth with a worm still on it and about a foot of line with the sinker. It was just too bad for some one who went home and told about that big one that got away. Fisherman's luck. Teddie was not so lucky in getting hold of a big one, although he got more in number than any one else. Pretty good for his first trip to the great fishing grounds of Aroostook. Teddie is only 16 but is sure game to the last minute. When the time came to go home he wanted to stay a few days longer but it was back to school.

We had all the fish we could eat in camp and had twenty-one fine-looking trout, a total of about thirty-five pounds, to take home. When we got to Rockabema we had a fine dinner and picked up our five salmon. Everybody went home satisfied, happy and looking forward to another trip next year — a longer one if possible.

THE STORY OF A 14 YEAR-OLD SPORTSWOMAN

BY BARBARA D. KENERSON, PLAINVILLE, MASS.

I have had a wonderful two weeks in Aroostook County, Maine. I have had lots of other good trips up there before, but this year I had a fishing license and went on my first real fishing trip.

I am fourteen years old and my father was a little afraid that I could not make the trip for it was a long hike. There were four of us in the party, Dad, Keith Edwards, Scott Adams and myself. We left Birch Point Camps, a beautiful spot on the shore of Pleasant Lake at Island Falls, at about 5.30 in the morning. We went two miles to the west branch of the Mattawamkeag.

We followed this river down six and one-half miles to a pool where Scott, who has quite a reputation as a guide, said there were usually some trout. We had followed the river but a little way when Scott saw a big deer in the river. She had not seen or heard us so we stood in a good place and watched her while Dad crept back with a camera and tried to take a picture.

After watching for three or four minutes we saw her lift her head and look toward the bank where we supposed Dad was. Then the fun commenced. The deer would blow and stamp her foot and then look towards the shore. We watched her do this for some minutes and then as Dad tried to get closer she quietly went ashore and after taking one last look disappeared in the woods. We saw two more deer on the way down to the pool and one on the way back. No wonder Dad likes to go hunting up in Aroostook.

We reached the pool early in the forenoon and before Dad and I could get our rods ready Scott had landed a nice trout. Believe me, I was some excited when I hooked and landed my first trout. We caught thirty-six trout in all and five of them were mine.

Then we thought of our lunch. After eating it we started for the boat which was eight and a half miles away. We saw two flocks of partridge and a hedge-hog on the way back. We got back to the camp about the time the sun was setting, tired but happy, and of course we were royally welcomed when the folks found we had some nice trout.

ADVICE TO HUNTERS IN THE MAINE WOODS

By O. H. LITTLEFIELD, Guilford, Me.

WHEN you go into the woods be sure that you have a waterproof match case with a good supply of matches. Take, also, a waterproof sack with at least a loaf of bread, a piece of salt pork and a small can of salt. This sack will not hamper you in the least, for a small one about twelve inches square, which can be slung over the left shoulder, will do. Be sure this sack is red. (Never wear anything tan in the woods.) With these supplies, one can keep quite comfortable even if lost in the woods at night.

When lost in the woods, do not travel fast and do not travel late in the day; make a camp early before it gets dark. Give your friends and relatives a chance to find you.

Find a large boulder or ledge, get on the windward side of it and make your camp. Pick up some long poles and lay one end on the ground the other on the boulder or ledge. After you have done this, cut or break off softwood boughs and cover the poles very thickly with them. Build a good fire just in front and get plenty of wood together to last during the night. Make a thick bed of boughs or dry leaves to lie or sit on. Do not sit on the wet ground.

To find the directions without a compass, first of all don't get frightened. Stop and think. If the weather is clear and bright the wind is either in the North or Northwest. If the weather becomes cloudy or looks like snow, the wind is nearly always either in the East or Northeast. Watch the sway of the trees, take your direction from that and you won't be far from right. Then again we know that most of the blow-downs in an opening or old cutting are blown down by a West or Northwest wind. Therefore, you will find the blow-downs lying to the East or Southeast in any opening or cutting. Notice these; it will be a great help.

Remember also that a rabbit or red squirrel, sprinkled with salt and roasted on a stick, will make good eating. Always carry plenty of bread.

Should you find an old lumber camp, remember there is a tote road leading to it somewhere. Find this road and do not leave it, it will lead you out somewhere.

Be sure what you are shooting at before you shoot. Remember there are other men in the woods, so don't take any chances.

BY TRAIN TO THE MAINE WOODS AND BEYOND

The Bangor & Aroostook Railroad is the Quick and Easy Route for Vacationists.

"TRAVEL by Train," is a popular slogan and in the case of the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad it is sound advice, particularly for the army of hunters who come into Maine for the fine sport offered in the Aroostook country and in the neighboring game region across the Canadian border in New Brunswick.

One new feature which will be appreciated by hunters planning trips for moose and caribou in New Brunswick is the completion of the new highway from St. Leonard to Campbellton. This means another short cut for sportsmen coming to this locality. A glance at the map will show the saving in distance and time over the former highway route via St. Leonard to Riviere de Loup and thence to Campbellton. This new St. Leonard, Kedgwick, Campbellton highway will give better access to many fine hunting localities in this section. Now it will be a comfortable trip by the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad to Van Buren where automobiles can be rented by hunting parties.

It does not mean a depreciation of the pleasures of motoring to emphasize the advantages of train travel.

Each season sees more parties coming to Bangor and leaving their automobiles there to take a Bangor & Aroostook train for "the woods" but compared with a through trip by rail from Boston or New York, motoring is slower, more fatiguing, and always liable to disappointing delays.

Why "travel by train" is more convenient and comfortable is shown by this illustration. It is approximately a two-days' drive by motor from Boston to Millinocket. Arrival at Millinocket in the afternoon means an overnight stop there and your camp wouldn't be reached until the middle of the next day, which would probably mean no hunting until the fourth day. By the rail service offered by the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad, leaving Boston by through sleeper tonight means arrival at Norcross, for example, early the next morning where an up-lake boat is taken which means arrival at camp before noon or about twelve hours from the time you left Boston. This is only one of many illustrations that might be given showing the advantages of "travel by train."

Another example:— you can take the 1.00 p.m. train from New York, arrive in Boston at 6.00 p.m., leave the train at Back Bay Station, Boston, have dinner comfortably at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, only three minutes' walk from the station, and then taxi to North Station, ten minutes from the hotel. The through Bangor & Aroostook sleeper is attached to the night train leaving North Station, Boston, which permits going directly through by sleeper to Van Buren, arriving there in the morning.

From Van Buren, by the International Bridge, only a few minutes away, is reached the New Brunswick town of St. Leonard, from which the Canadian National Railways furnish service to Kedgwick and points in the Restigouche, Metapedia and other localities which are famous fishing and hunting centers, and, as has been pointed out, St. Leonard also offers the new motor highway to Kedgwick and Campbellton.

CAMPING

YOU don't know why, but you roll over, you stretch a little, but not too much — "Hm-m-m," aren't those blankets comfortable! Don't those balsam boughs under you have a great smell! But you're off the subject, "What woke you up?" And then you get it with a bang, — it wasn't a noise that woke you, it was a smell — COFFEE — the guide is up. You lie there enjoying complete relaxation, the fire crackles merrily out in front of the tent. Another smell assails you, — bacon — nice crisp bacon, and you hear a plop and a hiss — that's one of the trout you caught on the fly just before sunset last night, and now, Bill, the guide, has just dropped it all nicely rolled in flour and corn meal, onto a hot spider. Hiss — there goes another, and you crawl hastily out of your blankets. You call, "Hey, Bill, I'll eat about six of those, ten slices of bacon, half a baker sheet of Johnny-cake and about four cups of coffee — and I'll be right there for it in two minutes."

That's what camping in the open does for the jaded appetite, — it does the same for the restless sleeper — the ragged nerves. It sends you home a new man ready for the day's routine. It makes no difference where you camp in Maine, in the mountains, along the highways, along the waterways or along the evergreen-fringed edge of her many lakes and ponds, the clear air, the quiet and the cool nights will work the desired results.

Come on up to Maine this year. — Vico C. Isola.

HERE'S A STORY ABOUT A MAINE WOODS MOOSE

This Big Forest Monarch Wasn't a Welcome Visitor for Two Vacation Parties.

By FRANK H. FLOYD, Brewer, Me.

ONE evening towards 6 o'clock, just after the middle of July, Lyndon Trueworthy of Brewer and I started out on the trail to Sandy Stream Pond, with the intentions of trying our luck for a few trout. This was our second visit to the pond that day.

We had left Chimney Pond early in the forenoon, after having spent four nights at that place. Our original plans had been for a one day's climb of the mountain, with the remainder of the week spent in fishing; but due to three nights of heavy rains, we had been obliged to prolong our stay at Chimney Pond. During this period, as the days were quite pleasant, we made three trips up the mountain, once through the Chimney Trail, and experienced the wonder and thrill of walking in and out of the clouds, with sometimes a glimpse of sunshine and forest beneath us and again a wall of cloud and mist. Much more could be said of the quiet and rugged beauty of this, Maine's garden of nature, but that is not my story.

After leaving Chimney Pond, we headed down the pathway which would take us to the junction of the Millinocket Tote Road and the trail to Russell Pond Camps. Here we had cached a goodly supply of food upon our journey up the first day. We had decided to pack our outfit in to Sandy Stream Pond, where we had been told we might find a good camping site. However, due to the heavy rainfall, we found upon our arrival that the spot which we had had in mind was not to our liking.

We located one of the rafts at the pond, after swimming our heavy packs through a few swamps, swollen streams and bogs and headed it across the pond toward a clearing which we desired to investigate for camping purposes. Somehow, the prospect of sleeping in the depths of well soaked marsh grass, crisscross with game trails showing evidence of their familiarity to moose and deer did not appeal to our notion of camping. There was a sort of morbid drowsiness overhanging the atmosphere. So we decided immediately to return to Roaring Brook, where we would make camp, have dinner and then return for a fishing trip. However, due to a pleasant little shower which visited upon us during dinner, we determined not to make camp then, but to return to the pond first for a little sport. We saw some game as we walked and spoke of a desire to see a moose.

When we reached the pond the sun was well down in the western horizon. There was a peacefulness and quietness about our surroundings. The water hardly rippled. An occasional note of a bird or insect was all that was audible.

Sandy Stream Pond is only a mite of water deposited down off the northeasterly side of Mt. Katahdin. It is quite shallow, as we soon discovered upon poling out from shore. We had found a substantial raft of new logs thrown roughly together and it was not long before we were preparing our rods for fishing. When, looking across the water toward our discarded campsite, we were astonished — that would be stating it mildly — to see a bull moose standing in the water.

Trueworthy called to the moose in order to attract his attention. He immediately pricked up his ears and looked in our direction, determined that the distance was too far for his poor vision to reflect the cause of this abrupt interruption of his evening meal, and directed his course towards our raft to investigate. It would not be exaggerating to say that there was an atmosphere of apprehension about our raft. We continued to prepare for fishing with one eye on the rod and the other upon the moose. The raft was about a hundred feet from shore and in possibly four feet of water.

On wallowed the monarch of the Maine woods, a big fellow, weighing, I should judge, somewhat over a thousand pounds. As he neared the raft I suggested to Trueworthy that if the moose were to get too familiar with us, we could use the poles to try to ward him off, and if we were not successful, it would be every man for himself. Trueworthy outwardly was very calm. As for myself, I experienced a strange, reckless sort of a sensation. It was a tense moment. The moose was now within ten to twenty feet of the raft. There he stood, half submerged in the water, the hair on the back of his neck bristling up, eyeing us as calmly as might a cow grazing in a pasture; a clumsy, awkward, homely appearing creature.

What was to happen? Would the moose charge us or would he be satisfied with a view of this human apparition? He pushed a step nearer. We awaited in awful suspense for our inevitable fate, to be dumped into the mucky waters of the pond, exhausted as we were from our unaccustomed activities of the preceeding days, to try to out-do the moose in a dash for shore.

Our visitor moved again — but this time the fates were kind to us — for, lowering his intent gaze, he wallowed off to the side for a short distance and commenced to feed upon reeds and lily pads, apparently having satisfied himself at our fearful expense that we did not amount to very much.

It was a picture. A wilderness pond in early evening. The unusual and strange form of a bull moose wallowing in the water, sometimes with head submerged for a full minute. Then again, with his homely jaws in motion, he would gaze in our direction to assure himself that his domain was not being molested. Towering above all was the mighty fortress of Mt. Katahdin, most beautiful from this point in the gorgeous rays of the setting sun.

We remained at the pond for about an hour. Shortly before our departure, our moose friend, having completed his evening repast, climbed to the shore and disappeared into the forest.

* * * * *

But this is not the end of my story. Some time after our return to Brewer another episode at Sandy Stream Pond was brought to our attention. It happened about a week following our visit.

A party, consisting of a man, a woman and a boy ventured in to the pond on a fishing trip. The man took one raft and the woman and boy pushed out on another. Hardly had they moved from the shore when they heard a commotion at one side. Looking up the pond they espied a bull moose with his fore-hoofs extended into the air, ready to turn in their direction.

The fishermen made for shore at once, which was just in time to meet the unwelcome visitor. The moose attempted to step upon one of the rafts with the result that he was caught between the logs. Whereupon, the man of the party seized a pole and held him at bay while the others gained safety in trees. The moose finally succeeded in disengaging himself from the raft and followed the escaped members of the party, but too late to cause any trouble.

Having discovered that he had been frustrated here, he returned to find the man, who in the meantime had manoeuvred the raft a short distance up the shore. The moose followed, and the two contending parties met on the water. The angered animal succeeded in getting himself caught in the raft again, tearing it apart. In the meantime our friend, the man, lost no time in scrambling ashore where he selected a tree for himself.

The enraged moose kept the party prisoners for about an hour, storming from one tree to another.

* * * * *

Notwithstanding these two episodes of life at Mt. Katahdin, if you have a desire to visit this beautiful natural park do so by all means. Furthermore, if you are inclined to be timid, try the Chimney Trail on Mt. Katahdin after a rain storm, then follow this up with a game of tag with a bull moose. If I do not miss my guess, it will either make you or break you.

BIG-GAME IS ON THE INCREASE in the AROOSTOOK COUNTRY

Read This Story by An Authority on the Maine Woods and You'll Want to Plan a Hunting Trip.

BY V. E. LYNCH, ASHLAND, ME.,
AUTHOR OF "THRILLING ADVENTURES"

A LONG about the first of December, or earlier, every year in the Northern Counties of Maine, real winter sets in and the snow begins to pile down storm after storm and often by the middle of February we have around four or five feet of snow in the woods, with the thermometer often registering 40 below, and I have found it is interesting to many people to know how Mother Nature has provided a way for the native game birds and animals to survive through the deep snows and cold weather.

First, we will take the bears, which, beyond a question of doubt are more abundant at the present day in northern Maine than in any other part of North America. The Maine bear often grows to weigh 400 pounds and being a short legged animal it would be impossible for him to travel through the deep snows in search of food, therefore, Mother Nature has endowed him with the ability to sleep through it all in a warm bed down under the deep snow away from the cold without food or water.

In November the bear cruises out a favorable place to prepare his den for his long rest. He usually digs down under a fallen pine log or finds a large cavity in the roots of a dead pine and carries in leaves and dead grass and prepares himself a deep bed, puts it in shape, then goes on roaming the forest until real winter sets in. Then he heads for his hole. He does not need a compass to assist him in holding a straight course through thick woods and tangled cedar swamps to the exact place. The most skilled woodsman in the world with all the compass instruments cannot compete with a bear in traveling a straight course through the dense forest.

It is believed by many people that the bear gorges himself with food before entering the den to sustain the body through his long sleep, but this is not true. When he enters his den his stomach is empty and as clean as the palm of a person's hand. All parts of the body seem to stop functioning with the exception of breathing and the circulation of the blood. He is compelled to stay in without food for four months and sometimes longer.

Naturally most people would believe that the bear would be in a poor and run down condition when he comes out in the spring, but such is not the case. He comes out in good shape and is strong, robust and healthy and will at once go into the swamps where the deer yards were and begin to search for the carcasses of deer that have been killed by the bobcats and left, many times, untouched. Here he loads up with venison and is from then a hearty eater until it is time to go in again. A male bear will most always den alone, but a female will generally take her cubs in with her.

Last November, while running bobcats with my hounds, I came across a bears' den which contained an old mother bear, three cubs and one yearling. Only a few days ago a New York sportsman and his guide came upon a bears' den, in the vicinity where I was guiding, with a 400-pound bear in it. There was no snow on the ground as yet but the bear had gone in for the winter as his stomach was clean and empty.

Nature has not dealt so kindly with our deer. They must live out in the cold all winter long and must have food to sustain life and must sleep on a bed of snow.

When the snow becomes too deep for the deer to travel through they collect together and yard up in herds in the big cedar swamps. Here they have beaten down trails leading in many directions and cedar boughs is their chief food. Once they yard up they must remain in the same yard until about April when the snow begins to thaw and freeze at night hard enough to hold up their weight. They are in pretty lean condition in the spring when the snow goes. They do not come through in such good condition as the bear but seldom do deer starve to death in Maine.

A sportsman may search the world over and I don't believe he can find a place in it where deer hunting will excel that of Northern Maine. There are still acres and acres of wild lands in this section that have never been hunted and thousands of deer die of old age without having even heard the crack of a rifle.

In these far back places the only enemy the deer has is the wicked bobcats that are becoming more numerous every year, but the bounty on these cats has been boosted by the State to $20, and many trappers are going in after them.

Northern Maine is also blessed with abundance of ruffed grouse which make excellent sport for the hunter who loves to shoot their heads off with a rifle. These birds go through the long hard winter in good condition. They feed mostly from birch buds after the snow comes. It is not an unusual thing for me while I am hunting the bobcat in midwinter, on snowshoes, to see a half dozen grouse budding in one tree.

Grouse roost in trees until the weather gets too cold. Then they fly and dive down into the snow and making a tunnel, push themselves back some distance. Here they remain through the night and will push up through the snow in the morning and fly to the nearest birch tree for their breakfast.

They sleep under the snow only when the weather is bitterly cold as they know from instinct that their lives while under the snow are always in grave danger, as many times the fox catches the scent of the bird when passing near. He locates the exact place where the bird sits, springs on it and has a nice warm supper.

The Maine bobcat grows to an enormous size. He is a night prowler, a long-ranger and a blood-thirsty killer. He kills merely for the lust of killing. I have often found deer killed by cats and not a single bite taken from them. The cat does not den up. He has a heavy coat of fur, and, like the deer, sleeps on the snow in the swamps, in and around the deer yards, near where his prey is to be found.

A TRIBUTE TO THE ANGLEWORM

YOUR rigorous fly-fisherman would have passed that grass-hidden brook in disdain, but it proved a treasure for the humble. Here, indeed, there was no question of individually-minded fish, but simply a neglected brook, full of trout which could be reached with the baited hook only. In more open brook-fishing it is always a fascinating problem to decide how to fish a favorite pool or ripple, for much depends upon the hour of the day, the light, the height of water, the precise period of the spring or summer. But after one has decided upon the best theoretical procedure, how often the stupid trout prefers some other plan! And when you have missed a fish that you counted upon landing, what solid satisfaction is still possible for you, if you are philosopher enough to sit down then and there, eat your lunch, smoke a meditative pipe, and devise a new campaign against that particular fish! To get another rise from him after lunch is a triumph of diplomacy; to land him is nothing short of statesmanship. For sometimes he will jump furiously at a fly, for very devilishness, without ever meaning to take it, and then, wearying suddenly of his gymnastics, he will snatch sulkily at a grasshopper, beetle, or worm. Trout feed upon an extraordinary variety of crawling things, as all fishermen know who practice the useful habit of opening the first two or three fish they catch, to see what food is that day the favorite. But here, as elsewhere in this world, the best things lie nearest, and there is no bait so killing, week in and week out, as your plain garden or golf-green angleworm. — Fishing with a Worm. — Perry.

*The BIG-GAME LANDS REACHED

The North-Maine Forests and the Neighboring Expanses in New Brunswick Offer the Finest Sport.*

TAKE a look at a map of Maine and observe how its north-most peak would penetrate into Canada were it not for the St. John river, which separates Maine and New Brunswick. Although there is a geographical division, actually this vast region of Maine and, over and beyond the St. John River, into New Brunswick, constitute one of the finest big game sections on this continent. For all this section, the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad is the quick and direct route. Without leaving the State of Maine, the hunter will find the best of sport in hunting deer and bear and if it is a moose or a caribou that is the wished-for prize, it's only a short distance across the border into the neighboring Canadian game area.

The splendid trains and the fine service offered by the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad emphasize the many advantages and comforts of railroad travel, especially in the fall hunting season. An overnight journey from Boston means, in most instances, arrival within reach of the hunting grounds before the close of the next day which is in striking contrast to the inconveniences which were the sportsman's lot, even within a few years if he was headed for the more remote game centers in the Aroostook country or such famous regions as the Restigouche section in New Brunswick.

Despite the yearly increase in sportsmen coming to the Bangor & Aroostook country there seems to be no falling off in the yield of fine prizes, indeed, probably more handsome bucks were shot during the 1931 season than in the past half dozen years.

All the famous game sections such as the Moosehead Country, Katahdin Iron Works, Patten, Ashland, the vast domain dominated by Mt. Katahdin, and the lakes reached by the way of Norcross, still attract many sportsmen and to these first favorites have been added new regions like the Fish River chain of lakes and other up-north localities all of which contribute to the increasing popularity of this section.

New opportunities for the sportsman in New Brunswick as well as in Maine have been opened up by railroad extension. For the unsurpassed Canadian hunting ground in the Restigouche country, and the other game centers between the St. John River and the Bay Chaleur the Bangor & Aroostook is the approach favored by all hunters of experience. The Restigouche country is an unusually good moose-hunting territory.

Maine moose always noted for their size and spread of antlers are now protected by law, but Maine continues its supremacy for fine deer hunting. Maine deer having always been desired by hunters because of their size; indeed, among the finest trophies are Maine deer heads.

Bear hunting is increasingly popular and there is great sport for the bear hunter in the Aroostook country. Maine bears often exceed five hundred pounds in weight, and notwithstanding their apparent clumsiness, they are crafty and quick to elude pursuers, so that to bring one down indicates skill as a hunter. Foxes, red, gray and black, are frequently shot, and bobcat and lynx are not uncommon. Along the shores of streams mink, otter and fisher are frequently found.

Canoeing parties, voyaging the waters of the Maine woods in summer days and who come upon moose and deer in streams and coves will testify to the abundance of game. Some canoeists have counted them by dozens during extended cruises.

The moose and deer take to traveling with the approach of the cooler days of Fall. Before the leaves begin to fall, the autumnal dryness prevails and the woods are more or less "noisy." The moose and deer, alert to every sound, take flight at the rustling of twigs or perhaps the crack of the dry leaves and are off in a twinkling. The autumn rains in early October, wet down the leaves and underbrush; there is less crackling, and conditions are materially changed. The first snow means even greater advantage for the huntsman on the trail for moose or deer. For the hunter planning his first trip to the Aroostook country the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad will be glad to give suggestions as to localities or other desired information.

THE AROOSTOOK COUNTRY FOR BIRD SHOOTING

The Aroostook country's fame as a big game section has naturally focused attention on moose and deer. There's bird-shooting, too, in the Aroostook country under ideal conditions. Partridge and woodcock are abundant and there are also snipe, black ducks, mallards, sheldrakes and wild geese. Most bird hunters who come to the Maine Woods are intent on the partridge. The "big woods" partridge is quite another bird from the sly, suspicious, quick-flying partridge which are hunted in the neighborhood of towns or settlements. The partridge of the forest is comparatively tame, but this does not mean he does not provide sport for the hunter who uses his rifle instead of a shotgun. Partridge shooting with a rifle is real sport and for the hunter, man or woman, who wishes to give a demonstration of rifle skill, there is no more convincing exhibition than hunting partridge with a 22-calibre rifle. To "crown" a partridge is generally regarded as a real accomplishment.

Partridge shooting over a bird dog generally speaking, is very good early in November. Then the partridge is frequently found in open country, feeding on alders and clover. There is good partridge hunting with a tree dog throughout the bird-hunting season but by the real sportsman this is not considered in the same class with wing shooting over a bird dog.

The Sportsman's Directory

A practically complete list of sporting camps, hotels and fishing waters reached from each station on the

Bangor & Aroostook Railroad

Camps and hotels are numbered to show by comparison with the list of Fishing Waters on what lake, stream or river they are located.

ALTHOUGH the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad is commonly associated with the Maine Woods — the canoeing and fishing waters, the big game country and the vast vacation region in the neighborhood of Mt. Katahdin — all in the big interior of the state, it also is the approach to a stretch of shore on beautiful Penobscot Bay, long popular with salt water devotees. Searsport is the deep-water terminal of the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad which gives direct contact with ocean shipping for the out-going products and incoming supplies of the Aroostook Country. At Searsport and at the adjoining and picturesque harbors of Stockton, Sandy Point and Fort Point are many desirable building locations as well as cottages and homes that may be rented for the summer season.

The foregoing list is compiled for the fresh-water fisherman. Those desiring salt-water fishing should go to Searsport or Stockton. These places, situated on Penobscot Bay, offer the vacationist fishing for eunners, tom-cods and flounders, and the digging of clams. Deep-sea fishing parties may also be arranged at these places.

It will be noticed that rates per day or week are not filled in, in several cases, but on account of existing conditions, the hotel and camp proprietors did not feel justified in giving rates for season 1932 so far in advance. Rates, however, will be given upon application, and such rates as are already given are subject to change.

A WORD TO CAMP-OWNERS

In the spirit of co-operation and for the further development of the Maine Woods as the nation's premier vacation section, it is suggested that camp owners give particular attention to answering inquiries and replying to letters from prospective visitors to Maine. In case camps are already filled, the inquirer should be treated courteously with the idea that later, when accommodations are available, he may become a patron. It is unnecessary to emphasize the importance of fair treatment to all visitors, particularly in regard to the avoidance of overcharges. It is noticeable that the best conducted camps, the owners of which are alert and eager to meet the desires of their patrons and who are equitable in the treatment of all their guests, have the same patrons year after year and these regular patrons pass along the word among their friends so that there is never a lack of patronage. Let's all work together to keep Maine in the lead as the great vacation State.

PHOTOGRAPHS, PLEASE!

To the kindness of our friends who have been so thoughtful in remembering In The Maine Woods with prints of their photographs is due no small measure of the continued popularity of this annual publication of the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad. May we ask for a continuance of this generous co-operation.

CAMPING ON THE WEST BRANCH, AT KATAHDIN BROOK

By CLAUDE L. SEALE, NEW YORK

CAMPING in The Maine Woods is always a wonderful vacation as well as an inexpensive premium for health insurance for another year. But camping at Katahdin Brook on the West Branch is picking one of the front row seats in the orchestra of the Katahdin Valley. Why? Well in the front row you are supposed to be able to see everything — and so you can from Katahdin Brook. Here one has the famous brook which winds its way down Mt. Katahdin through deep gorges, over rocky ledges, past sweet smelling spruce forests to finally join the equally famous West Branch of the Penobscot River. The trails up Mt. Katahdin offer the most hardy mountaineer exciting sport and the natural wild scenery is only surpassed by possibly the Rocky Mountains. Listen folks and I'll try to give you just a glimpse of the happiness to be found here in The Great Outdoors.

First of all travel by train. Hop out of your comfortable "sleeper" on the Bangor & Aroostook and jump off at Norcross feeling refreshed and hungry having breathed in good Maine air from the time you retired. Here at Fowler's comfortable woods hotel you can appease the "inner man" with a breakfast that you would call "dinner" back among the sky-scrapers. Change to the good old woollens that keep you warm and dry and get ready to have the time of your life.

Arrange before hand to have a good guide. Believe me he is a wonderful investment and he pays you dividends each day he is with you. He will be ready with a good canoe packed with just the right amount of food you will need for the exact length of "the desired trip". Catch the paddle he throws you — get in the bow and you're off with the knowledge you have a good man in the stern to guide you through rapids, around rocks, not to mention keeping your course straight "in the wind".

You are now in North-Twin Lake heading on up through Pemadumcook and Ambejejus Lakes to the West Branch. It is afternoon now and your well experienced guide heads for a good camping spot.

While he is getting the tent ready you get out the old tackle and eagerly attach a Montreal, a Silver Doctor and perhaps a brown and gray hackle to your leader. A few casts in the quick water — that's it just behind that rock that sticks out — right in the eddy — a swirl — a flash — a snap of the wrist and oh boy you're testing your skill with a half-pound trout. At last he is netted, you're trembling all over from the excitement. Returning to show the results of your efforts to the guide you are amazed at the transformation of the camping spot.

The tent is up — you gaze inside and see your duffle, ready to open, your bed of spruce boughs all made. Outside an expert fireplace has been devised — what is that you smell? Well, well if it isn't bacon and french-fried potatoes all ready to go with that broiled trout. And what is that in front of the fire? Why it's a pan of hot biscuits. There is no use of fooling around, you simply wade right in and clean up. It is evening, the dishes are "all done" and put away. You are smoking your pipe in front of the fire impressed with the restfulness that surrounds you. The stars are a little lighter than perhaps you've ever seen them. The tall forest trees are reaching toward them casting a deep shadow on that beautiful silver ribbon — the West Branch. It is cool, yes even chilly and the warmth of the camp fire is grateful. You discover that you are sleepy and soon you are fast asleep on your little bough bed. There are no restless, wakeful nights camping in the Maine Woods.

The next morning what energy you have — you are a different person and indeed you are. You want to do things and go places. You sip your coffee and are lost in admiration at the sunshine filtering through the trees. You realize perhaps for the first time how many different shades there are of green. The river is beautiful. A big crane flies over a mirrored logan and dives for a chub — he too is hungry for breakfast.

To-day your guide mentions would be a good day to explore Katahdin brook. A lunch is packed and you're off and here I admit I must fail to give justice to a description of the beauty you will find. Picture a winding brook over gigantic ledges, through deep gorges with wild turns of white water, deep pools of crystal clearness with wild scenery. There is no man made road here thank God. Just a trail, a memory of old logging days that are over — The State of Maine will see to that. On and on you go and if you wish, climb that old rascal, Mt. Katahdin. It will take many days to explore this "big hill" and there is enjoyment a plenty to be had.

A change from woods lore is to explore a day on the river in the canoe. There are so many wonderful places to go — down to the numerous logans around Debsconeag where five pound pickerel will take "the spoon". Try your luck for togue in the big dead-water. Cast your fly for a salmon at Abol Falls or Pockwockamus Falls. Keep your eye open for a deer anywhere along the bank of the river. Cruise among the many little islands made by the fascinating twistings of the West Branch. Spend a day at Horse-Race Brook and view Mt. Katahdin from there. Cast your lure on the way back at Sourdna-hunk Falls. Spend a day or two on the numerous ponds that are near your camp. There are no dull moments here.

Into each life a little rain must fall and on these days there are books to read, cards to play, naps to be taken, trips to be planned, confidences to be exchanged, world problems to be settled and at the end the reward perhaps of a new experience of being lulled to sleep by the pattering of rain upon canvass, the sighing of the spruce trees, the memory of a wonderful yesterday the hope of a glorious to-morrow and back home again with memories no money can buy.

KATAHDIN

*Grand mountain crest! Katahdin Queen,
In all thy majesty serene,
Thou rulest o'er each lesser hill,
O'er lake and river, stream and rill.*

*Ten thousand landscapes own thy sway,
Where Nature charms with proud display.
An altar built by hand Divine,
One bows and worships at thy shrine.*

*Seen from afar in summer blue,
Delightful is thine ev'ry view,
When winter's wild Winds fiercely blow,
How glorious thy crown of snow.*

*O'er rugged trails to lofty peaks,
The climber finds the thrills he seeks,
Crawling along the knife edge slow,
Death frowns at him from depths below.*

*At last from pinnacle raised high,
Where summit seems to touch the sky,
Spellbound! One scans the landscape round,
With thoughts of God and awe profound.*

THE PLEASURE OF FLY-FISHING

IT is ungracious and futile to compare the merits of the different forms of fly-fishing; salmon fishing, wet-fly and dry-fly-fishing for trout. Each, if it be good of its kind, has special charms and satisfaction of its own. It has been said already that the pleasure of angling is not limited to fly-fishing, though this may be the most exquisite form of it. All anglers know what this pleasure is: it is too comprehensive and pervading to be described within the compass of words; it is too subtle in some of its forms to be analyzed; too intimate to be explained; to those who are not anglers it cannot be conveyed, or made intelligible. The gift of the power to enjoy has various forms and diverse objects. There is no need for those who have one form of this gift to look askance at those who have another. But surely as life draws to a close no one can look back on days of recreation with more certain gratitude than he who has had the opportunity of fly-fishing and has been born with the gift of enjoying angling. — Viscount Gray.

AROOSTOOK...HOW IT WON ITS WIDESPREAD FAME

The Nation's Greatest Potato Producing County Continues to Make New Records.

ALTHOUGH In The Maine Woods is primarily a handbook for the sportsman and vacationist, the fame of Aroostook as the greatest potato-producing country merits mention in this publication of the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad which has been so closely linked with the development of this premier section of the State of Maine. It is appropriate, too, that at least passing reference be made to some of the important industries in Aroostook.

The Maine potato crop for 1931 is estimated at 50,960,000 bushels and of this amount about 90 per cent is credited to Aroostook County. The magnitude of this crop is emphasized by a comparison of these figures with the estimate for the next highest State which is Minnesota, whose potato crop for 1931 was estimated at 28,880,000 bushels. Aroostook County has the distinction of shipping more carloads of potatoes than any one other State outside of Maine.

Aroostook's position in the field of potato production is not the result of chance but of certain definite physical and economic advantages, which coupled with the enterprise of her people have been important factors in bringing her to this place of leadership. Among the natural factors that might be mentioned as contributory to the success of this area might be mentioned a soil of ideal texture, a cool growing season, abundant precipitation, and a showers dispersed through the growing season the crops seldom lacks for moisture. A factor of importance in reducing production costs is the rolling nature of the topography making possible the use of labor-saving machinery.

The development of efficient machinery during the the last quarter century has done much to increase the acreage handled per farm and to multiply many times the output per man. The entire land area of Aroostook county is about equal to that of the state of New Jersey. The amount of land in farms is about one-fourth greater than the land area gently rolling topography. In no other place in the country has the physical factors essential to successful potato production been combined in so satisfactory a manner as in the potato growing section of this mammoth county.

Chief among those natural factors that have aided in Aroostook's development is the type of soil to be found throughout the highly specialized area.

Abundant moisture supply is an essential in producing large crops of potatoes. Here again Aroostook conditions approach the ideal. With an annual precipitation varying around 40 inches well distributed throughout the year and with frequent of the state of Rhode Island. The production of a large portion of Aroostook potatoes is concentrated in an area along the eastern boundary of the county where very intensive methods are followed and high production per acre secured.

No more beautiful or scenic agricultural district is to be found than will be experienced in a ride through Aroostook County during the growing season, more especially in the month of August. Green fields of potatoes, yellow fields of grain ready for harvest, and a rolling topography present a beautiful picture. Hard surface roads and good gravel roads add to the pleasure of such a trip.

And now a word about the industrial importance of the country served by the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad. The Great Northern Paper Company's plant at Millinocket is the largest newsprint plant in the United States and at Madawaska, far up on the St. John River, the Fraser Companies, Ltd., have constructed a mammoth paper mill which produces newsprint, book papers, etc.

These Horses Know How to Travel Woods Trails and Tote Roads

The total annual production of paper in the Bangor & Aroostook territory is 325,000 tons annually and is steadily increasing.

In various localities on the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad are wood working mills.

The Bangor & Aroostook Railroad, itself, has an important industry in its repair shops at Derby which have been greatly enlarged and in which the most modern type of machinery has been installed. The shop work has reached the degree of efficiency that since 1923 the Bangor & Aroostook has built all its own freight cars at its new shops. More than 1000 cars have been built and additional new cars are being turned out weekly.

The Bangor and Aroostook Railroad Company not only believes in Northern Maine but in the whole territory it serves and in the splendid future that lies ahead; it is a part of that territory and seeks to render a transportation service which will aid in making the future prosperous for all. It will be the continued purpose of the directors and officials of the Bangor and Aroostook Railroad to render the highest grade of service to the public it serves, to assist and care for, in every proper manner its employes who have always proved ready to give the best that is in them in carrying out their daily tasks, and to care for, to the best of their ability, the interests of their stockholders.

Aroostook County's progress and the development of the Bangor and Aroostook provides another emphatic argument to the boast that New England is steadily on the up-climb.

Ever feel your hair raise or had a great thrill run up your spine? You will if you hunt with me or one of my guides at my chain of camps in the great virgin wilds of Aroostook County and have a big bear or lordly buck pointed out to you. My camps are located in a virgin forest which runs back for more than 200 miles without a single break and here is bear and deer for all. I also have some of the finest lake and stream fishing that can be found.

Before making reservations elsewhere see what I have to offer. Write for my free, 40-page illustrated camp booklet; its worth seeing, and let me refer you to people in your own State or City who have fished or hunted at my camps. HERE'S WHAT SOME OF OUR FRIENDS THINK OF "IN THE MAINE WOODS"

The following are extracts from letters received regarding this publication:

"Your booklet is excellently gotten up and I was at once struck with the thoroughness and painstaking manner in which the Railroad Company edited this guide book. I believe such a book must take a long time to edit."

✦ ✦ ✦ ✦

"Have just been looking over my last year's copy of your book 'In the Maine Woods' and I can honestly say that my trigger finger is itching, and I will be counting the weeks now, and a little later the days, and then the hours, until I am on my way to the most wonderful spot in the East: the great and glorious Maine Woods."

"I want to thank you sincerely for your kindness in sending me a copy of your booklet, 'In the Maine Woods,' which came to me like a breath of the pines of my native State. It is packed full of matter that is interesting to me and I certainly hope for another trip to Northern Maine."

✦ ✦ ✦ ✦

"Your book is the most alluring invitation that can be extended to a stranger to visit the best place on earth."

EAGLE LAKE CAMPS — ASSEMBLY ROOM

There is no better spot in Maine for fishing and hunting. Waters are famous for record trout and salmon; fly fishing all summer. Surrounding country abounds in deer, bears, few moose and game birds.

Eagle Lake Camps are a model woods resort. Electric lights and running water in all cabins. Eleven cabins with baths. All conveniences are provided without the loss of real Woodsy Rustic Charm. Two large motor boats and canoes for the use of guests. Camps are reached by motor boat six miles from Eagle Lake railroad station.

Northern Maine is famous for its cool nights, dry and invigorating atmosphere, laden with health-giving qualities from the pine and balsam forest. Private cabins with baths; also large, spacious dining room and office.

HUNTERS!

For eleven years I have been with these camps. Every hunter who has spent a week to ten days with us has taken his deer allotment home. We have five outside camps in different directions from the main camp. Our camps command 100 square miles of hunting ground.

Eagle Lake is 18 miles long and as deep as 125 feet. Big Fish, Portage and St. Froid Lakes, and all Red River lakes flow into it from one side. Long Lake, Mud Lake, Cross Lake and Square Lake flow into it from the other side. It is screened, and we claim as good early fishing as any place and better Summer fishing than any place for Salmon.

FOR A REAL WOODS VACATION

Farthest North of any Sporting Camps in the United States

FISHING that makes glad the angler's heart may be enjoyed on famous Square Lake and on seven other connecting waters—all renowned for the fine sport they offer. Trout, salmon and togue. Good fly fishing in May and September. Salmon pool at the camps

HUNTING that cannot be beaten in all the Aroostook country can be had in the great game section surrounding the Inlet Camps location. Deer and bear for the big game devotee and the best of partridge and duck shooting for the gunner.

There is no finer vacation spot in all the Maine Woods than at Inlet Camps Running water and private baths

There is an unusual opportunity for canoeing and the Thoroughfare between Square and Cross Lakes is especially favorable for women and amateurs.

TOGUE POND CAMPS — in the shadow of Mt. Katahdin

KATAHDIN FROM TOGUE POND

BEAUTIFULLY situated between Upper and Lower Togue Ponds. Delightful bathing; beach runs by the door of each cabin. Excellent view of Mt. Katahdin from piazzas of all cabins. Our cabins are all new and are kept clean. Nearest sporting camps to Katahdin on Basin Pond Appalachian Trail, also our own trail, which is the shortest way to the summit of Katahdin. Transportation, food, guides, camping outfits furnished for Mountain parties. One desiring Rest, Recreation, Fishing, Hunting, Hiking, Canoeing or Mountain Climbing will be delighted with Togue Ponds. Very few places in Maine equal our location — beautiful scenery, bathing beaches and numerous short trips from camp over 20 ponds within 3 miles of camp. We have our own garden, cows and hens to supply our table with vegetables, milk and fresh eggs. Can be reached by auto 18 miles from Millinocket. New England telephone connections.

*Write for booklet describing our camps and surrounding country.
Booklet gives rates, guides' wages, transportation charges, etc.*

MAYNARD'S CAMPS

24 Cabins

Rockwood (Kineo Station), Maine

Located in the centre of the Moosehead Lake Region, only 3 miles from Mt. Kineo, and known from coast to coast for its wonderful Trout and Salmon fishing—considered the best in Maine. Moose River, Moosehead and Brassua Lakes, 100 ponds and streams are your fishing waters. (Trout in all of them.)

Our Camps are recognized by authorities as one of the most popular, unique and outstanding Public camps in Northern Maine.

Here you will find all the conveniences and service of an up-to-date hotel (without that woodsey charm being taken away).

Every cabin is screened, has a comfortable porch, 2 to 5 rooms each, electric lights, Simmons' mattresses, hot and cold water and bath.

The Main Camp has ten rooms, dining room, lounge and open fire; library of 1000 volumes, radio, piano, and games for rainy days.

Plenty of wild life and outdoor sports.

We serve only good wholesome food, properly prepared.

An abundance of home-grown vegetables, and our own milk and cream.

All our water comes from never-failing tested springs.

By AUTO: leave Quebec Highway at Jackman, Maine, 27 miles to camp, over good gravel road. By TRAIN: Bangor & Aroostook R. R., to Greenville, Jct., thence by steamer. Or Maine Central R. R. to Kineo Station.

Let us send you our camp folder, containing full information, pictures and maps.

Rates $4.50 to $6.00 a day, American plan. Open May 1st to October 15th.

Address: WALTER H. MAYNARD, Proprietor

THE PINE TREE CAMPS, Long Pond

These camps have just been built and are located on the shore of beautiful Long Pond which is a chain of ponds nine miles long. The camps are eight miles from Jackman village and are on the new state road running from Jackman to Moosehead Lake.

The sleeping camps are built of logs with a large porch in front and are arranged to accommodate from two to four people. Each camp has its own bathroom with hot and cold water. There is one large dining room which is very attractive, giving a beautiful view of the Lake. The camps have electric lights and are supplied with spring water. The table is of the very best, being furnished with fresh poultry, meat and eggs, and our own vegetables.

We have fine trout and salmon fishing through the whole season. We have thirty miles of waterway for canoeing and boating of all kinds, and from these camps one can cover a large section of the country either by canoe or automobile.

The room will be limited this season, so make your engagements for the summer early and you will make no mistake.

Wonderful days await you at The Mount Kineo, which has been created solely for those who practice the gentle art of leisurely living. It's the cream of the summer inland resorts — amid picturesque, pine-clad vacation grounds.

Golf on a splendid 9-hole course in the shadow of the famous mountain. Bridle paths for a canter; excellent fishing for big trout, togue or salmon; mountain climbing; good bathing beach and glorious scenery.

New highway from Jackman to Kineo Station (route 195) makes The Mount Kineo easily accessible from Portland and Canada.

Through Pullmans from New York to Kineo Station whisk you there without change. Through sleeping cars, Boston to Bangor, and parlor car Bangor to Greenville; or excellent highway via Newport and Greenville, thence steamer.

Light, airy rooms — trained hotel employees to give you service de luxe. Truly a rendezvous for fashionable folk.

Bring your clubs, your tackle, your bathing suit, bring your family — and you'll stay if you like to play.

Let us send you our new illustrated booklet of The Mount Kineo and The SamOset on Rockland Breakwater.
