"THE OLD LADY OF THE FLEET"
U.S.S. NEW YORK

'Build me straight, O worthy Master!
Staunch and true, a goodly vessel,
That shall laugh at all disaster,
And with wave and whirlwind wrestle!

* * * * *

Just so long as men go down to the sea in ships—the "Twice told tales 'tween Tattoo and Taps" will ever sing the praises of "Wooden ships and Iron Men."

'Tis not of the age of "Wooden ships and Iron Men" that herein lies a tale—this is a story of stout-hearted men who trod the deck of a stout-hearted ship—a ship that carried on in World War I and World War II, and served her country in keeping with the highest traditions of the Naval Service.

HISTORY OF THE U.S.S. NEW YORK

The U.S.S. NEW YORK, whose career spans a thirty-one year period embracing a volume of tradition which might well be the envy of any ship of the Fleet and whose name has been borne of six vessels of the United States Navy through 170 years of naval history, has the unique distinction of having played a noteworthy role in two world wars.

April 1914

Her construction was authorized by Congress on 24 June, 1910. On September 11, 1911, her keel was laid; and she was commissioned 15 April, 1914. The NEW YORK, with the TEXAS, was the first of our 14-inch gun ships. She rated 21 knots and her tonnage compared favorably with the best the British had, about 27,000 tons.

May

Her first mission came soon after her commissioning when she was ordered to Vera Cruz at the time of the "Mexican Incident". There she remained until the fleet was withdrawn. Rear Admiral Frank Fletcher, in command of the Fleet at Vera Cruz, shortly thereafter came on board the NEW YORK as flag.

December 1915

It was in December of 1915 that the tradition behind the NEW YORK's nickname the "Christmas Ship" began. Berthed at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, the officers and men of the ship suggested to their commanding officer, Captain Hugh Rodman, later Admiral Rodman, that a Christmas party be given for as many orphans as the big ship could accommodate. The success of the occasion resulted in the idea becoming a custom which has since spread to other ships.

November 1917

In November of 1917, the United States Battle Squadron 6, under the command of Rear Admiral Hugh Rodman with the NEW YORK as his flagship, sailed to reinforce the British Grand Fleet in the North Sea. Its arrival on 7 December, 1917, was greeted by cheering British bluejackets joined by Admiral Sir David Beatty, himself, Commander-in-Chief of the British Navy. The NEW YORK'S captain at the time was the late Rear Admiral Charles (handlebars) Hughes, "beloved and seaman-like." This ship was the only United States flagship with the British Fleet.

1918

During 1918 the NEW YORK was given basis for the claim that her decks have felt the tread of more royal personages and high ranking admirals than those of any vessel in the United States Navy.

May, July, November, 1918

The parade of royalty began in May, 1918, when the Duke and Duchess of Athol were visitors on board. On November 3, Crown Prince Admiral Hirohito, now Emperor of Japan, and his staff were official guests of the ship. Seventeen days later came King George V and His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, now the Duke of Windsor. The King had been on board previously on 22 July, a few days before the King and Queen of the Belgians had honored the battleship with their presence.

That same year Admiral Sir David Beatty made several visits to the NEW YORK, as did our own Vice Admiral Sims. Another visitor was the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Franklin D. Roosevelt. And twelve days after the ship's arrival in English waters, a committee from the House of Commons were guests on board.

On 21 November, 1918, the NEW YORK played an important role in one of the most historic and impressive events of World War I—the surrender of the German High Seas Fleet at Scapa Flow. In the disposition she was the third squadron behind H. M. battleship QUEEN ELIZABETH, flying the flag of Admiral Sir David Beatty.

Following the German Fleet surrender, this ship met President Wilson in mid Atlantic and escorted him to Brest, France, from where he proceeded to the peace conference at Versailles.

During the spring of 1919, the NEW YORK operated in the Caribbean Sea. That summer she moved to the West Coast as a key unit in the new Pacific Fleet being formed.

1926-27

In 1926-27 she was completely modernized at the Norfolk Navy Yard. The most apparent visible change was the substitution of tripod for the old-fashioned cage masts.

1929

After her remodeling she returned to the West Coast, where she remained until 1929, when she came back to the East Coast again for an R.O.T.C. run to Cuba and Bermuda.

1930-36

The years 1930-36 were marked by Fleet Maneuvers in the Pacific which took the NEW YORK to Hawaii and Midway.

1936

In 1936 the ship's anti-aircraft battery set an all-time, all-Navy high for efficiency in short range practice. Captain Leo F. Welch, U. S. Navy was the commanding officer at the time.

May 1937

The following year on May 12 the U.S.S. NEW YORK sailed for England with Admiral Hugh Rodman on board, who was to act as the personal representative of President Roosevelt at the coronation in London of King George VI. Admiral Rodman had been a former captain of the ship in 1915-16 and flag in her at the time of the German Fleet surrender.

The NEW YORK was the honored vessel chosen to represent our Navy in the Grand Naval Review that took place in English waters on May 20, 1937.

1938, 1939-40

In 1938 the venerable battleship was named as training ship for Naval Academy Midshipmen. The cruises which followed took her to Le Havre, France; Germany, through the Kiel Canal; Nova Scotia and Quebec, Canada (1939); and Venezuela and St. Thomas (1940). In the last four months of 1940 the NEW YORK also made four V-7 training cruises between New York City and the Canal Zone.

In the year of 1926, the NEW YORK had her first "face-lifting"—among other changes she converted to oil burning. Other changes were made in keeping with the times, and the NEW YORK again went to sea—her guns and excessive weight caused her to take on a heavy roll in any kind of a sea.

Other changes were made with the passing of the years, and it is interesting to note—by way of comparison—THE U.S.S. NEW YORK of 1914 and the U.S.S. NEW YORK of 1945:—

BULLETIN BOARD

Outstanding Events in the History of the NEW YORK

1914: Ensign Kemp C. Christian, U.S.N., reported aboard; later became her Skipper—1943-1945—Captain Kemp C. Christian, U.S.N.
* * * * *

1915: When the officers and men of the NEW YORK, at Christmas, at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, suggested to their Commanding Officer "that a Christmas Party be given for as many orphans as the ship could accommodate", they started a Navy Tradition that has lasted over thirty years. The Commanding Officer—then—Captain Hugh Rodman—afterwards Admiral Hugh Rodman, Commanding 6th U. S. Fleet, World War I.
* * * * *

1918: On November 3, shortly before the occasion of the surrender of the German High Seas Fleet, at Scapa Flow, Crown Prince Admiral Hirohito, now Emperor of Japan, and his staff, were official guests of the NEW YORK. The NEW YORK is the only U. S. ship that Hirohito ever visited.

The NEW YORK's log dated 3 November 1918, carried this item: "At 4:25 H.I.H. Admiral Prince Hirohito, accompanied by the Prince of Connaught, and staff, came on board and inspected ship."
* * * * *

1918: On November 21, the NEW YORK played an important part in one of the most historic and impressive events of World War I—the surrender of the German High Seas Fleet at Scapa Flow, where the NEW YORK was the Flagship of the Sixth Battle Squadron of the British Grand Fleet, the only U. S. Flagship with the British Grand Fleet.

NEW YORK Has Schooled Most Flag Officers

The U.S.S. NEW YORK has schooled more admirals and commodores than any other ship of the United States Fleet.

NEW YORK Has Trained more than 13,000 Men during the War

Approximately 750 officers and 11,000 enlisted men of the United States and Allied Navies and Coast Guards were trained in the NEW YORK Main Battery School and D. E. Gunnery School during 1943-44. In the summer of 1944 she trained approximately 1800 Midshipmen from the United States Naval Academy.

NEW YORK Represents United States at Coronation of King George VI

The NEW YORK was the honored vessel chosen to represent the United States Navy in the Grand Naval Review that took place in English waters, on 20 May 1937, on the occasion of the coronation of King George VI.

NEW YORK Has Played Host to a Multitude of Royalty

During her thirty-one years, the NEW YORK has played host to the following royal personages, among others:

King George V

King and Queen of the Belgians (King Albert)

Prince of Wales (now Duke of Windsor)
Sultan of Morocco
Crown Prince Admiral Hirohito
Duke and Duchess of Athol
Prince of Connaught

NEW YORK Limped through the Iwo Jima Bombardment

The NEW YORK participated in the Iwo Jima bombardment with one blade missing from her port screw, reducing her maximum speed to thirteen knots and hampering her maneuverability. In spite of this impediment, the NEW YORK closed to within 1500 yards of the invasion beaches for much of her bombarding.

LUCKY NEW YORK Has Never Been Damaged Though Often a Target

Though repeatedly subjected to all forms of enemy attack—torpedoes, bombs coast artillery and suicide planes by the Japanese at Okinawa and Iwo Jima, coast artillery by the French at Safi, and torpedoes by the Germans at Fedala, North Africa—the NEW YORK was hit only once and then sustained only superficial damage to the ship and two minor personnel casualties. The ship, unbelievably lucky through all its thirty-one years, is one of the three of thirteen old battleship of the United States Fleet to weather the entire war undamaged.

The Luck of the LUCKY OLD LADY OF THE FLEET may be traced back to the horse-shoe which was mounted on the ways when her keel was laid in the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

TROPHIES

In Peace—as well as in War—the NEW YORK made the headlines—proficiency in Gunnery, Engineering, Communications and Battle Efficiency Merit. A "Mention in Dispatches" found the NEW YORK with top-billing in many "ALNAV" communications to The Fleet.

A few of the trophies:—

1915: Auckland Cup Trophy;

1915—

1916: American Defense Society Cup—awarded the battleship making the highest score at Short Range Battle Practice.

1916—

1917: Gunnery Trophy:—White "E";

1921—

1922: Knox Trophy—Gunnery Trophy—White "E"; 1924—

1925: Admiral Trenchard Section, Navy League Medals;

1925—

1926: Commendatory Merits—Red "E", Letter of recognition by Secretary of the Navy (95% trophy);

1928—

1929: Standing #1 in Communications;
Standing #2 in Engineering;

1930—

1931: Standing #1 in Engineering;
Standing #2 in Gunnery;
Standing #2 in Battle Efficiency Merit;

1930—

1931: Trophy—White "E";

1932—

1933: Admiral Trenchard Section, Navy League Medals;

1933—

1934: Admiral Trenchard Section, Navy League Medals.

"NEW YORK OR BUST"

(Being a re-print from "THE NEW YORKER", Oct. 27, 1945)

The U.S.S. NEW YORK, a shabby, cross-grained battleship, is a vessel that would endear itself to the sort of people who like to drink at the bar of the Murray Hill Hotel. She is a raffish old ship, and for quite a few years she has been carrying more armor, more men, and more guns than she can manage with any grace at all. Her appearance suggests a Lexington Avenue GRANDE DAME staggering home with a load of truck from Macy's. She was built in the parasoled age of President

Taft and the Stanley Steamer; she took part in one campaign, one war, and a number of formal ceremonies without firing a shot in earnest, and then, at an extremely advanced age, waddled boldly into battle and did excellently. She is an admirable relic of another generation. In her better days, she was spruce, mannered, and elegant, and in the time of her decline she has been doughty and tough, with weathered sides and a fine, clear eye. Along with these commendable virtues, she has also some of the faults of age. She is cranky and has a tendency to break down when going from one place to another. She made American naval history at Okinawa, but she almost didn't get there. The men who sail the NEW YORK take a wry pride in her and call her, surprisingly often, the "Old Lady"; one of them once said that she was meant to be played by Alison Skipworth.

Anthropomorphism survives more in sailors, perhaps, than in men of any other occupation, and, perhaps more than any other vessel, battleships are credited with having human characteristics. No two battleships, even sister ships, are alike, of course. All of them are custom jobs, built painstakingly at tremendous cost. It takes a year or so to construct one, and by the time she is finished some characteristics are built right into her; she will acquire others as she grows old. Men in shipyards understand all this, and so do the men who sail the ships.

The NEW YORK is the sixth warship of the United States Navy to bear that name. Since Colonial Days there has always been a NEW YORK. The first was a gondola, mounting three guns and carrying forty-five men, in General Benedict Arnold's fleet on Lake Champlain. She burned near Crown Point on October 13, 1776. The second, a frigate of 1,130 tons, mounting thirty-six guns, was built in New York in 1799, cruised the West Indies, and served as flagship for Captain Richard V. Morris in the Mediterranean in 1802 and 1803. She burned, along with many other things, at Washington, in 1814. The third NEW YORK, a 2,633-ton ship of the line, never did put to sea. She was destroyed by the Federals when they abandoned the Norfolk Navy Yard in 1861. The fourth, originally named the ONTARIO, a twenty-one gun sloop of 2,400 tons, was broken up in New York and sold for scrap in 1888. The fifth NEW YORK had more of a history. She was an 8,150-ton armored cruiser, launched on December 2, 1891, and she served as the flagship of Admiral Sampson in the Spanish-American War. She was at the battle of Santiago and helped destroy the Spanish fleet. After it was decided, in 1911, that only battleships should bear the names of states, her name was changed to SARATOGA and later to ROCHESTER. After a tour of duty on the Asiatic Station, which ended in 1933, she was decommissioned. Five years later she was sold as scrap iron.

The current NEW YORK'S span of professional life corresponds roughly to that of Walter Lippman, who came up from Harvard about the time her keel was laid. The launching ceremonies are usually the most gala event in the life of a vessel, but most men acquainted with naval craft feel that the keel laying and the commissioning are more moving and important. The laying of the keel, which is the beginning of actual construction, has an ancient, rather awkward solemnity. There isn't much talk. Usually a small boy, of proper shipbuilding or seafaring lineage, puts in the first rivet. The keel of the NEW YORK was laid on September 11, 1911, at the New York Navy Yard, in Brooklyn, and the first rivet was driven by a grandson of Admiral Sampson, a four-year-old named Wat Tyler Cluverius, Jr., now a Rear Admiral. The launching took place on October 30, 1912, and Miss Elsie Calder, sixteen-year-old daughter of Senator William M. Calder of Brooklyn, christened the ship. Miss Calder became the wife of Robert C. Lee, who, in turn, became a Navy Captain. President William Howard Taft was there, along with George von L. Meyer, Secretary of the Navy; Governor John Alden Dix of New York; J. P. and Miss Anne Morgan; Senator Calder; Congressman Fitzgerald; and Congressman Fitzgerald's daughter, Kathleen, nine, who threw flowers in the water after Miss Calder broke a bottle on the NEW YORK'S bow. Senator Calder and Congressman Fitzgerald were there because it was felt locally that they had kept several thousands of their constituents at work by prevailing upon the Navy to build the ship in Brooklyn.

Mrs. Lee recalls today that she wore a white dress and carried a bouquet of pink roses at the ceremony. The men at the Yard had woven a basket for the champagne bottle out of strips of silver, which they figured would not only protect her from flying glass but would be a nice souvenir for her to take home. The metal protected the bottle so well that it didn't break when Miss Calder swung it against the ship. As the vessel, to the horror of Miss Calder and everyone else, was sliding down the ways with the bottle still whole, a sailor riding on the bow grabbed the line from which the bottle hung and swung it away from the ship's side. Bottle and silver holder smashed back against the hull and broke, and the NEW YORK, properly christened, slid with a great splash into the East River.

The newspapers the next morning reported that tears had come to President's Taft's eyes, and Mrs. Lee remembers that they came to hers, too.

The NEW YORK was commissioned in a typically sober, brusque naval ceremony on board the ship on April 15, 1914. Captain T. S. Rodgers read his orders from the Navy Department, assuming command, accepted the ship from the builders, set the first watch, dismissed the men massed on deck, and went to pay formal calls on his superiors in the Yard. The first entry in the log noted that 1,000 pounds of onions, 600 dozen eggs, 10 pounds of Fleischmann's Yeast, 1,000 pounds of bread, 490 pounds of cabbage, 539 pounds of pork loins were put aboard and that the ship had received a silver loving cup from the Frigate CONSTITUTION Chapter of the Daughters of 1812, "officers and men assembling to accept it." The next day, a set of silver arrived from the New York Yacht Club, which, while the ship was building, had kept a huge scale model in its clubrooms. The model is now used in classes at the Naval Academy. "No ceremony", the log says laconically of the receipt of this gift. There was no ceremony, either, when the Woman's Christian Temperance Union gave comfort bags to the ship's company. Ten days before the NEW YORK was commissioned, Josephus Daniels, Wilson's Secretary of the Navy, had forbidden the use of alcoholic liquors on any United States warship, a step seamen of other nations considered very unnautical.

The U.S.S. NEW YORK represented a different attempt of the Taft administration to emulate the exuberant Big Stick policies of Theodore Roosevelt. The difference was forced on Taft by political circumstances, Roosevelt had wanted four battleships a year, but Taft, faced with a hostile Democratic majority in Congress, had to hold his demands to two a year. The party out of power, in this case the Democrats, usually believes in economy. There was some embarrassment before the NEW YORK was completed. Five million, four hundred thousand dollars had been appropriated to build her. When the vessel was about half finished, it was announced that its cost was going to exceed the sum voted by Congress. Secretary of the Navy Meyer ordered construction held up for several months until Congress granted another million. When the ship was completed, it was found that she had actually cost less than had been estimated. At the time of her commissioning, the NEW YORK and the TEXAS were the two finest warships afloat. They were the first battle-ships to be fitted with fourteen-inch guns. They had what contemporary reporters called "the best and thickest armor in the world."

In their photographs they look ungainly in comparison with modern warships, but they were thought to be very handsome. Unconventionally, they were equipped with reciprocating engines. The turbine, an efficient device which furnishes smooth, steady power, had been used instead of reciprocating engines for several years by most navies, including our own. At the time the TEXAS and the NEW YORK were projected, however, the government was quarreling with the turbine builders, who refused to adopt standards and specifications set by the Navy. Reciprocating engines, of a design similar to that used in most locomotives were installed in the TEXAS and the NEW YORK as a rebuke to the turbine builders, who have been cooperative ever since. The NEW YORK and the TEXAS also had cage masts—American innovations later discarded for tripods, or pagoda-like armored conning towers.

Naval officers wore high, starched collars, and their dress blues were cut a lot like the dress whites they wear now, with jackets buttoning tight under the chin. The men's uniform was much like the present ones, although one but got rid of: seaman were allowed to discontinue wearing a jackknife on a lanyard around the neck, a detail some boys' sailor suits still preserve. In those days the food aboard ship was heavy, and long on such caloric stuff as beans, bread, roast beef, potatoes, bologna, cheese and eggs. Navy recruiting officers considered it necessary to stress the fact that the Navy was not full of foreigners, illiterates, ex-convicts, and ne-er-dowells, that church services were held on board, that the food was wholesome, that corporal punishment had been abolished, and that sailors in general led a pleasant life.

The NEW YORK had her shakedown cruise after being commissioned and, combining personal and national business, went to Vera Cruz. It was at the time Mexico and the United States were having words. The NEW YORK steamed in and out of the little port for a few months, being lady-like and not firing her guns, then came back north in the fall, passed a routine year in Atlantic waters, and finally tied up at her home yard in Brooklyn in December, 1915. On Christmas Day that year, three of her sailors, walking along Sands Street, a rowdy, ramshackle avenue near the Navy Yard, saw three ragged children staring into a bakery window. The sailors bought some decorations and toys and took the children, and as many others as they could round up, aboard ship, where they hung up the decorations, gave out the toys, and had a party. From that came the traditional Christmas parties on the NEW YORK for children, a custom which eventually spread to other ships of the Navy. After the holidays, the NEW YORK led the Atlantic Fleet on a cruise to Bermuda and the West Indies. East of Puerto Rico, she did some practice firing at targets eighteen thousand yards away, a prodigious distance for that time. Frank J. Sprague, the inventor, who was along on the voyage as a civilian observer, later told the New York Electrical Society about the irresistible fire power of the NEW YORK and about a new device, the Sperry gyro-compass, which was being tried out on that vessel.

When it began to look as though the United States was about to enter the first World War, the NEW YORK was ordered back home from maneuvers off Cuba. She reached Hampton Roads on March 27, 1917, ten days before we declared war. The crew expected to put out for Europe immediately, but the NEW YORK, along with the rest of the Atlantic Fleet, was held off Yorktown all spring and summer. The ships became a huge camp where thousands of recruits were trained. President Wilson visited the fleet on August 11th and gave the NEW YORK special attention by crawling around in the No. 4 gun turret in his frock coat. A few days later the fleet sailed for New York, and finally, in November, the NEW YORK, the TEXAS, and a number of other ships comprising Battleship Division Nine, under Admiral Hugh Rodman, a former skipper of the NEW YORK, set out for Britain. The TEXAS went aground off Block Island and damaged herself, so she was convoyed back to port by the NEW YORK, which then turned around and caught up with the division. On arrival in European waters, this unit was renamed the Sixth Battle Squadron, assigned to the Allied Grand Fleet, under Vice-Admiral David Beatty, and based at Scapa Flow. After that, its job was patrolling and keeping an eye out for the German Fleet. On Christmas, 1917, a hundred poor children of Edinburgh were given a party aboard the NEW YORK, anchored for the moment in the Firth of Forth. Admiral Rodman, described in a rather literary fashion by one of his men as "at home in a tempest, a bull in a ballroom", imposed a hard discipline on the Sixth Squadron, which was later commended by Admiral Beatty as one of the most efficient units in his fleet. The NEW YORK'S men scrapped with British sailors on liberty precisely as they had scrapped with men of other American battle-ships in American ports. Their only contact with the enemy came when the ship unwittingly ran down a German submarine at the entrance to Pentland Firth. The NEW YORK'S screws were damaged and the submarine presumably was sunk. In July, 1918, the Cld Lady received a visit from King George V, in the course of which he inspected the stokehold. An exuberant fireman asked him if he would like to throw some coal on the fires, and to the surprise of all the King said he would, and he did. The shovel he used was afterward fondly burnished and hung in the ship's trophy room, and the crew of the NEW YORK had a new boast: theirs was the only ship in the American Navy ever to have been stoked by a British monarch. On November 3, 1918, this notation was entered in the log: "At 4:10 held quarters for muster and inspection. At 4:25 H.I.H. Admiral Prince Yorihito accompanied by the Prince of Connaught and staff came on board and inspected ship. Hauled down quarantine flag during visit. At 5:15 H.I.H. and staff left the ship." Yorihito was a yeoman's spelling of Hirohito, who, as Crown Prince, was making his precedent-breaking tour of Europe.

Much of the Grand Fleet was in the Firth of Forth when the Armistice was announced. No one aboard the NEW YORK seemed much affected by the news until nightfall, and then, when the lights were left on and searchlights criss-crossed in the sky, the men began to go wild. The same thing happened on the other ships. Captains moved around among their crews, shaking hands. On the British ships, the order came to double splice the main brace, which meant a quadruple shot of King's tot for each man. On the American ships, the sailors raided the supply of alcohol used for torpedoes. Small boats visited among the ships, carrying officers from wardroom to wardroom. The Americans spent most of their time on British vessels, where there was liquor.

Ten days later, the NEW YORK was one of the ships that put out to sea to accept the surrender of the German High Seas Fleet of thirteen battleships and battle cruisers, six light cruisers, forty-nine destroyers, and many auxiliaries. A few days afterward, Admiral Beatty came on board the NEW YORK for a farewell visit and inspection. The officers and men were assembled and he said to them, "I know quite well that you, as well as all of your British comrades, were bitterly disappointed at not being able to give effect to that efficiency that you have so well maintained. It was a most disappointing day. It was a pitiful day, to see those great German ships coming in like sheep being herded by dogs to their fold, without an effort on anybody's part, but it was a day that everybody could be proud of . . . We do not want sympathy; we want recognition of the fact that the prestige of the Grand Fleet stood so high that it was sufficient to cause the enemy to surrender without striking a blow . . . We trust your departure is only temporary and that the interchange of squadrons from the two great fleets of the Anglo-Saxon race may be repeated."

The NEW YORK, flying a fifty-foot home-bound pennant bearing the legend "In God We Trust, New York or Bust," headed westward soon after Admiral Beatty's visit. She arrived with the squadron off Staten Island on Christmas Day, and the men expected to be ashore by nightfall. Secretary Daniels, however wanted to review the entire squadron, so the sailors stayed aboard until the next day, when Daniels and his Assistant Secretary Franklin D. Roosevelt, watched the ships pass in review off Bedloe's Island. Once the crews got ashore, the celebration lasted well into January.

By the mid-twenties, the NEW YORK was regarded as middle-aged, as battleships go, and in the second rank of fighting ships. A little over two years after being commissioned in 1914, she had been outmoded by the NEVADA, OKLAHOMA, ARIZONA, and PENNSYLVANIA, but she kept her style, and she was fitted as a flagship. The Navy used to fit only a few if its warships as flagships, and those that have been so equipped stand a good chance of retaining their prestige for a long time. Such a ship was, in addition to quarters for her own officers and men, suites and offices for an admiral and his staff, and she must dress the part. The NEW YORK and the rest of the fleet set out in 1919 for the Pacific. People on the West Coast were exceedingly pleased to see almost the entire Navy in their ocean, and the NEW YORK was feted all the way from southern California to the State of Washington. By then the crew of the NEW YORK consisted of a nucleus of old professionals and a group of young men who wanted to see the world. She was under the command of Captain William V. Pratt, who today, as a retired admiral, writes for NEWSWEEK. Both Admiral Pratt and Rear Admiral Charles F. Hughes, who commanded the NEW YORK for a while, eventually became Chief of Naval Operations, the highest job in the Navy; the NEW YORK is the only ship that has had two skippers who reached that height. Under Pratt, the NEW YORK won the fleet football trophy and furnished the bulk of an all-fleet football team which defeated an Army team 124-0 on Armistice Day, 1920, at Pasadena. As the years went on, the NEW MEXICO, the MISSISSIPPI, the IDAHO, and then the Big Five—the TENNESSEE, COLORADO, CALIFORNIA, MARYLAND and WEST VIRGINIA—were commissioned, and the NEW YORK went even lower on the list of fighting ships.

In this period of her life she developed some of the traits which made men call her the Old Lady. She stayed in the Pacific for a long time, and the crew found it to their liking. Even the new seamen thought of themselves as old, tough sailors, and their officers were wise enough to let them think so. The men referred to their ship not only as the Old Lady, but, with equal sentimentality, as an old pig-iron sink, and went in for tattooing, even adopting, without apology, the blue dragon on the shoulder which before them had been the mark only of men on the China Station. Tailormades became the fashion on the NEW YORK for shore liberty and even for inspections. The jumpers of these uniforms had trim, narrow collars instead of the regulation broad ones, and trousers flared extravagantly at the bottom. The jumpers were long and tight, and the oxfords were of patent leather. The sailors of the OLD LADY were as natty as they come, and the adventurous girls who worked the dance halls on Market Street in San Francisco, Main Street in Los Angeles, and Water Street in San Diego, watched for their arrival. The racket jobs on board—laundrymen, pressers, tailors, barbers, canteen yeomen—were sold for hundreds of dollars, and money won in crap games kept many a sailor off extra duty. The men got out of work when they could, and yet they would spend their own money for paint and brightwork polish for their quarters. The Old Lady was the most stylish ship, and her men the most trim and pugnacious, in the Pacific. They made themselves at home in Honolulu, Panama, Portland, Bremerton and Seattle, and talked big and fought well with the men of other ships.

In October, 1926, the NEW YORK returned to the East Coast and went into drydock at Norfolk. She emerged, after almost a year, a quite different ship. She had been converted from a coal-burner to an oil-burner with equipment salvaged from ships scrapped under the Washington Treaty. Her torpedo tubes had been removed, and bulges, for protection against torpedoes, had been built onto her hull; her old cage masts had been replaced by strong tripods, which would support modern fire-control apparatus. Some of her five-inch guns had been removed, and a number of anti-aircraft and other guns had been added; the angle of elevation of her big guns had been raised, increasing their range by several thousand yards; and her deck armor had been made heavier. A warship is a carefully planned and intricate piece of construction and any major changes are likely to upset her balance and impair her sea-worthiness. The revision and several later ones have made the NEW YORK a vessel that rolls and pitches, wallows a bit, and plods rather than cleaves her way through waves, as a battleship should. The new guns and armor gave her excessive weight and her roll took on the exaggerated lurch of a drunk.

She remained in the Atlantic most of the time and pitched around disgracefully in the rough going in that ocean. Her men had to work a good deal of the time in oilskins, and, to make matters worse, the compartment for the Marines on board was now so placed that the sailors had to go through it to get to their own quarters. Animosity between the sailors and the Marines was always at a high level. The usually detached "Jane's Fighting Ships" speaks severely about the NEW YORK and the TEXAS, which also underwent conversion" . . . slow since refit, hard to handle, and bad sea boats in rough water—wet and rolling so that the waves ride the bulges into the amidships casemate. Neither of these battleships is reckoned effective for war purposes."

The NEW YORK, as a flagship, has always had her social duties. In 1920 when she was still a well-behaved and unreconstructed boat, Franklin D. Roosevelt, who had just been nominated for Vice-President by the Democratic Party, celebrated by sitting up most of the night in the skipper's cabin with Captain Pratt. She participated for several years in war games, usually attended by vessels of the British, French, German, and Japanese Navies. She was a guest at the California Pacific International Exposition in San Diego in 1935, and then went to England for the naval review in honor of the coronation of King George VI, in 1937. There, the log noted: "Fireman 2/c _____ suffered a nose injury while disembarking from small boat due to misjudging distance from boat to gangway after five days leave."

In England, she saw lots of German and Japanese craft, also guests at the review, most of them younger than herself and nearly all more stylish. During the first season of the New York World's Fair, her officers and crew put in one of the most strenuous social seasons a ship's complement has ever undergone. Grover Whalen had expected the whole American Navy to anchor in the North River and had lined up enough engagements to go around. The officers and men of the NEW YORK, and the few other ships the Navy could spare in those days, had to do their best.

In December, 1938, the NEW YORK tied up in Norfolk and was boarded by a group of studious-looking and mysterious-acting civilians from the Naval Research Laboratory. They installed some freakish equipment in a cabin in the forward superstructure, and only the civilians and a few officers ever saw it. All that most of the crew got to see was an odd-looking antenna, which they came to call "the flying bedspring." Subsequently it became known that the installation was called "Radio Detection and Range-finding Apparatus, Model XAF", or "radar", for short. The NEW YORK was the first large American ship to experiment with radar. For several months she indulged in maneuvers baffling and monotonous to the crew but thrilling to the men who understood what the activities up forward were about. On January 14, 1930, as the Old Lady was heading out of Hampton Roads, the men at the radar scope picked up Thimble Shoal Diaphone, a tall light and fog whistle, at eighty-five hundred yards. Later, in a daylight test, the outlines of the TEXAS were plotted at twenty-nine thousand yards. On January 16th, in what was considered the most crucial test, the NEW YORK, riding the choppy Atlantic at night, picked up four "enemy" destroyers at sixteen thousand yards.

Then came the second World War, and the Old Lady, no longer a fighting ship, had to go out to battle. First she wallowed in the sea lanes, guarding convoys, her guns manned by crews that were largely green, because her old men had been scattered through the service to steady new men on new ships. Then, at 0430, 8 November 1942, aged twenty-eight, she went into action outside the harbor of Safi, in Morocco, to help cover the African invasion. The Batteire des Passes, at the harbor entrance, opened fire on an American destroyer in the Southern Attack Group, and the battle was on. The NEW YORK was ordered to knock out another battery, Railleuse, one of the most formidable shore installations the French had anywhere. The Old Lady's first salvo, the first she had ever fired in combat, was a direct hit, knocking out the battery's fire detector and silencing its guns for two hours. When Railleuse started shooting again, the NEW YORK silenced it for good. Most of this was done in the dark, the NEW YORK'S officers plotting their position by dead reckoning.

For some time, romantic students of naval history and readers of Conrad thought it would perhaps have been best if the NEW YORK's career had ended with her first, spectacular, direct hit, for soon afterward she took a ground swell at Casablanca so badly that she almost turned over. She probably would have but for the seamanship of her shrewd and hardened skipper, Captain Scott Umsted. As it was, she was badly battered and it was extremely difficult to turn her to starboard. She came home and went into drydock again at Norfolk. Then she returned to convoy duty. She usually was accompanied by the Cruiser BROOKLYN, a vessel she put upon greatly. The NEW YORK and the BROOKLYN and some destroyers set out for Iceland with a convoy. After a few days, the Old Lady would break down. A destroyer would be detached from the escort to see her home, and the BROOKLYN would carry on with what she had left. The NEW YORK was finally assigned to duty in Hampton Roads, which was about the equivalent of knitting socks. For a year, in the company of the WYOMING, which had lost most of her guns after the disarmament treaty of 1923, she was used to train thirteen thousand officers and men of the United States and Allied Navies. She and the WYOMING would race to see which would reach the only available docking space on Saturday afternoons, and the WYOMING would usually win. The Old Lady would have to drop anchor out in the harbor and her sailors would have to resort to small boats to reach shore and liberty. Her magazines were turned into classrooms with blackboards. She was in the final, melancholy phase of a warship's life; she had become a training ship. One day in late April, 1944, a rumor got around that she was going to push off next day for the invasion of Europe. One of her officers, a proud and eager man, ordered the magazines stripped of school equipment. Men gave up their shore liberty to help him put the stuff over the side and pile it on a pier. The next morning, desks, blackboards, pointers, and erasers were back, on higher authority; the rumor was nonsense.

And then came a rumor that was true. The NEW YORK got up steam and went into the Norfolk Navy Yard for two thorough overhauls. She was outfitted with new guns, new radar, a new cafeteria, new most everything. Now, in addition to her six five-inch guns and ten fourteen-inch guns, she carried an anti-aircraft setup of forty-two twenty-millimetre machine guns. She spent the summer taking Annapolis midshipmen on cruises to Trinidad. At length, in November, in the company of the NEVADA and the TEXAS, she headed for the Pacific.

A thousand miles west of Panama, the NEW YORK broke down again. The other battleships—both of them elderly, too—left her, and made for San Pedro with a destroyer escort. Her crew had Christmas ashore. After a while their ship was declared to be in good shape again. She spent most of January in battle practice, bombarding San Clemente Island, near Catalina, in competition with the new battle cruiser ALASKA. At the end of the month she was at Pearl Harbor, where, regulations having relaxed since Josephus Daniels' day, she took aboard 2,000 cases of beer. Then she headed west for the invasion of Iwo Jima, and a thousand miles out ran into more trouble. This time she lost a propeller blade. "Nobody said anything" a gunner's mate has recalled, "but you felt like everybody wanted to go off in a corner by himself and cry. We had all got as excited as hell in a quiet way. Maybe we were green, but we knew how to do what we had to do. We had been trying not to be cocky, but we were feeling professional and we were ready. Then that goddam old pig-iron bastard goes and fluffs out again."

The NEW YORK was ordered to Eniwetok Atoll, and she made it, rattling and vibrating. She had to maintain radio silence on the way, but she sent a plane ahead requesting that she be allowed to go into action anyway. She was told to proceed to Saipan, and from there she sailed for Iwo.

A young yeoman has told me of an occurrence on this momentous trip of the NEW YORK. The Captain was practicing golf shots one day on the bridge, using a No. 5 iron, a piece of cotton in place of a ball, and a Marine guard as a retriever. Everything was placid, except the blade-shy propeller, when a strange object was seen following the vessel. It looked like a luminous metallic balloon, and was immediately and unanimously judged to be a Japanese secret weapon of some sort. "You should have seen our captain", the yeoman said. "He came back to the fantail and looked through his special binoculars. 'I see it', he said quietly. He was a great man in a crisis. Marines were assigned to the twenty-millimetre guns, and they gathered in a little group on the starboard side of the bridge. The privates began opening ready boxes, and the gunnery sergeant, very professional, put on his flash gear and rubbed pink cream on his face. The Captain yelled, calmly, of course, to the gunnery officer up in the sky control,

'Guns, give me a range on that object!' The gunnery officer replied, 'approximately eight hundred yards.' The captain said, 'Good. I thought it was about that. Let 'em have it.' The twenty-millimetres sounded like popguns, and the tracers faded into the sky, very short, too. The Marine sergeant shouted, 'Bring them more to the left' The captain yelled, 'Goddam it, guns, you're short! Open it up, open it up!' The gunnery officer switched to the three-inch dual-purposes and opened the range to fifteen thousand yards. Still too short. We signalled to the destroyer alongside and it tried its five-inch guns. Still no dice. It was getting late, and the mess cooks went below to fix supper. Finally, the navigator, who'd been asleep, came topside, rubbing his eyes. He put his hands down, looked around, and said, 'What the hell you shooting at?' That's Venus, a damn planet.' That's what Venus looked like out there," the yeoman concluded, "a Japanese secret weapon. The gunnery officer said he guessed he was pretty short on that range.

The Old Lady clattered up into her assigned position off Iwo on the night of D minus four. Then, for three days, steaming awkwardly up and down the coast, she, along with other warships, poured shells into the island. On the last day, she moved in to less than a thousand yards from the shore and fired at point-blank range. Her gunners could see Jap troops scurrying from one pillbox to another, and in the afternoon her fourteen-inch guns hit an ammunition dump, which went up in a tremendous explosion. She fired all her fourteen-inch ammunition—1,290 shells. All told, she expended 1,350,000 pounds of shells—more than any other ship had during the pre-invasion bombardment. She lost one of her scouting planes, but suffered no damage herself. On the morning of D-Day she was ordered back to Saipan. She promptly dropped a blade from her second propeller. She bobbed along at four knots as her crew heard about the invasion over the radio. She laid up in a floating drydock in the Admiralties after a stop off for mail at Ulithi Atoll.

The crew drank beer, played ball, and swam while the Old Lady got two new propellers. Then she made for Okinawa, at eighteen knots. There, whatever her crankiness and her frailties, she was glorious. She outraced a Jap torpedo. She took a Kamikaze plane on her catapult. She put in seventy-eight days off Okinawa, the longest time an American warship has ever spent in a single engagement. She fired more than five and a half million pounds of shells into Okinawa, a world's record. She fired more shells than did all our warships in the invasion bombardment of Tarawa. She began firing five days before the landing, and she was the only capital ship to stay on the job continuously until the job was finished. She was the only one of our battleships and cruisers there not temporarily put out of action by Kamikazes or Japanese gunfire. Yet her duties were among the most dangerous. During one afternoon she scored twenty-five direct hits on Shuri Castle. Japanese planes, submarines, suicide swimmers, and suicide boats tried to hurt her, and many of the men on the Old Lady aged noticeably in those fearful weeks. The skipper, Captain K. C. Christian, had only faint touches of gray in his hair when the NEW YORK went into the Pacific on this errand. It was white when he left Okinawa. Yet, with all the noise and violence, life on board was disciplined. After the tenth day, Captain Christian ordered physical drill for the men every morning; the NEW YORK ceased firing while it was going on. One day, when several cans of pineapple juice were missed from a storeroom, the skipper ordered cease fire while the ship was searched, unsuccessfully. Every man had to be shaved by 8 A.M. each day, and on the next to the last day off Okinawa a lively War Bond rally was staged aboard her.

The NEW YORK finally left Okinawa and headed home, her record swelled with commendations from Army and Marine outfits, which said that her fire was the most accurate they had ever seen. Her hull was wrenched and warped from the strain of her gunfire, but any limping she did now was justified, any eccentricities could be dismissed as battle neurosis. She put in at Pearl Harbor, where she was visited by Archbishop Spellman, who was given one of her battle flags to bring back to St. Patrick's. Under the command of Captain Grayson Carter, she made her leisurely way to Los Angeles, where many of her crew were discharged from the Navy. Then she went down to the Canal and through to the East Coast.

After a full life, the NEW YORK now faces the inevitable end. She is to be "stricken from the Navy roster." She may be scrapped; she may be blown up by an experimental atomic bomb; she may be sold to some friendly power in need of a battleship, no matter how old and cranky and shrewish. "I kind of hope the Chinese get her," a boatswain's mate who has served on her said the other day. "They'd understand her."

Veterans of War and the Waves—The aged but still formidable battleship USS New York cuts through the waves off the U. S. East Coast en route to a war mission.

"Something to shoot at!" She did it. A statistical summary of the record of the U.S.S. NEW YORK shows the following:

Operations

1088 Days with the Atlantic Fleet (December 1941-November 1944)

North African Landings (Safi)

2 Convoy Trips to Iceland

2 Convoy Trips to Scotland

2 Convoy Trips to Casablanca

Training Duty in the Caribbean Sea and Chesapeake Bay

276 Days with the Pacific Fleet

Assault on Iwo Jima

Assault and Occupation of Okinawa Shima

Damage Sustained and Personnel Casualties

On 14 April 1945, a Japanese suicide plane attacked the NEW YORK off Okinawa, demolishing one NEW YORK spotting plane on the catapult and crashing some fifty yards from the ship. The NEW YORK received only superficial damage.

Two men were slightly wounded in action during the suicide plane attack of April 1945. Ammunition Expended Against the Enemy

The Storm Strikes—A Navy Supply vessel dragging its anchor off the shore of Iceland during a record breaking January storm which whipped up mountainous seas. At times the icy wind blew more than one hundred miles an hour.

July 1941

In the months immediately preceding the outbreak of World War II, the NEW YORK was active in the Atlantic enforcing this country's neutrality. In July of 1941 she escorted troops to Reykjavik, Iceland in the historic peaceful occupation of that island as a defensive base.

Then followed a "neutrality cruise" in the North Atlantic, seventeen continuous days at sea, a notable accomplishment for the North Atlantic in those days. For three months after the neutrality cruise, the NEW YORK, in company with the TEXAS and the ARKANSAS, acted as station ship at Argentia, Newfoundland, as protection against any possible enemy action in the waters near the new American base there.

Hatches were battened down, all loose gear secured and every ship in the storm took a severe "Dusting".

A motor sailer breaks adrift from one of the Navy Patrol vessels off Iceland.

Winter at Sea.

December 1942 February

At the outbreak of war on December 7, 1941, the NEW YORK was undergoing a major overhaul at the Navy Yard, Norfolk, Virginia. Within two months, repairs had been completed, the ship had sailed from New York to Halifax, Nova Scotia, and from there had headed for Iceland in what was her first war-time convoy trip. Submarine contacts were made en route, one just outside the harbor of Reykjavik, Iceland, and numerous depth charges were dropped.

April

The NEW YORK returned to the East Coast and in late April set out on her second convoy trip to Iceland through the wintry North Atlantic waters, again via Halifax.

June

In June of 1942 she made the first of two convoy runs to Scotland. There were 25-30 fast transports and tankers in the convoy, accompanied by 12 destroyers, one heavy cruiser and the NEW YORK. At the outset of the trip, an unverified surface sub contact was made astern of the convoy. Later a submarine surface contact was made by one of our destroyers which opened fire. Results were not substantiated. Reaching the Firth of Forth without casualty, the ship anchored at Greenock, Scotland, and after one week returned to New York.

July

The second cruise to Scotland proceeded without incident. Both these runs were made during the summer of '42 when the U-boat menace was at its height. Submarine contacts, though unverified, were numerous and the cruises were punctuated by the explosions of depth charges.

November

At Safi Harbor in the November North African Landings, this ship was credited with neutralizing the formidable Batterie Railleuse, strongest coastal defense unit in the region. Emerging unscathed from the 300 rounds fired by the battery's four 130mm guns, the old battleship hurled in sixty rounds from her main battery; one shot ricocheted through the observation slot destroying all within and silencing the battery.

Rear Admiral Davidson, Commander Southern Attack Group, observed in his report that but for the effective fire delivered by the NEW YORK, the Batterie Railleuse could have made Safi Harbor untenable for our forces.

Silencing the battery had saved the destroyers COLE and BERNADOU from severe damage.

The NEW YORK left Safi on 9 November and sailed for Casablanca, where she was 4-6 thousand yards from the AUGUSTA when the latter was bombarded with salvos from the French battleship JEAN BART. And the NEW YORK was in Fedala Harbor when six ships were torpedoed on the 11th and 12th of November. Both times she sustained no damage.

December 1942 March

In December of 1942 and March of 1943, two convoy trips were made to Casablanca.

It is interesting to note that in the six Atlantic convoys escorted by the NEW YORK, two each to Iceland, Scotland and Casablanca, none of our ships were lost or damaged as a result of enemy action.

On 21 March the rails were manned for an official visit from the Sultan of Morocco and his aides.

In an Atlantic action May 29, 1944 she was torpedoed by a Nazi U-boat. The escort carrier USS Block Island was sunk in the same battle. The Barr has now been converted into a transport.

July 1943 — June 1944

During the year from 7 July 1943 to 10 June 1944 a Destroyer Escort and Main Battery Gunnery School was conducted aboard the NEW YORK. The ship operated in the Chesapeake Bay area during the period training personnel of the United States Navy and Coast Guard and Allied Navies. The Main Battery School (14"/45) and the D. E. Gunnery School (3"/50, 40mm, 1.10/75 and 20mm) trained approximately 750 officers and 11,000 enlisted personnel during this period.

July - August

In the period from 11 June to 31 August, the NEW YORK made three cruises between Annapolis, Maryland, and Trinidad, B. W. I., training approximately 1,800 midshipmen from the United States Naval Academy.

November 1945

On 21 November the ship started for the West Coast passing through the Panama Canal and arriving at San Pedro, California, on 6 December. During her thirty-four day stay here the NEW YORK underwent an intensive program of gunnery training off San Clemente Island in preparation for future support of amphibious landings.

January 1945

Leaving San Pedro on 12 January, 1945, the NEW YORK proceeded to Pearl Harbor from where, after refueling and arming, she set out to join other heavy units of the Pacific Fleet at Ulithi, then forming for the assault of Iwo Jima. En route she lost one blade from her port screw, reducing her maximum speed to 13 knots. Forced to leave the task group with which she was steaming (IDAHO and ARKANSAS), the NEW YORK headed for Eniwetok to survey the damage and await further orders. With her screw still damaged, she left Eniwetok after a two-day stay and proceeded directly to Saipan to meet the task force which had since formed at Ulithi. At Saipan she participated in a rehearsal of the Iwo Jima operation.

February

In early February the NEW YORK, her speed still impaired, left Saipan and set out for Iwo Jima well ahead of the main body, which was to catch up later. On February 16 she began the pre-invasion bombardment of Iwo Jima with the others units of Task Force 54. The NEW YORK bombarded for three days, the entire pre-invasion bombardment period, and then was withdrawn because of the damage of her screw. During this three-day period she expended more ammunition than any other ship present. And she made the most colorful shot of the operation with a direct main battery hit on an ammunition storage which resulted in its destruction.

The NEW YORK was under repair at Manus for three weeks in preparation for the assault and occupation of Okinawa Shima. Travelling alone, she arrived at Okinawa on 27 March, L-5 Day, and again joined Task Force 54. For 76 consecutive days following, she remained in action, a period longer than any other capital ship in the longest and largest naval action of the war. The NEW YORK participated in the pre-invasion bombardment, covered the landings on the beaches in front of Yontan Airfield, and furnished close support for the advance of the Tenth Army and Marines from the beginning of the campaign to the very end.

During this 76-day period, the NEW YORK fired more than 11,000 rounds of 14-inch and 5-inch ammunition, some 5,500,000 pounds.

AT OKINAWA

The "BIG MOMENT" in the life of the NEW YORK, came at Okinawa. The long drills of Peace-time; exacting shipboard routine; gunnery exercises—"paid off", at Okinawa:

During 78 days in the Okinawa Campaign the U.S.S. NEW YORK provided more close support for the advance of ground troops than has any other ship in the history of naval warfare. Antiquated, uncomfortable, and ill-equipped to defend herself from the air, she weathered the most intense air attacks of the Pacific War and stuck it out with the Army and Marines from before L-Day to the bitter end.

Following pre-invasion and covering bombardments of 27 March to 1 April and the few days following when she prepared the way for the advance of the First and Sixth Marine Divisions to the north of Ishikawa Peninsula, the NEW YORK moved south in close support of slow advances by the Twenty-Fourth Army Corps.

On the 7th and 8th of April, the 96th Infantry Division was engaged in a furious assault on what one artillery officer later described as the Jap Siegfried Line, anchored at the west by a series of ridges just south of the towns of Kakazu and Machinato. The battle gained such intensity that the official Navy communique later called it the heaviest artillery duel of the Pacific war to date. In answer to requests for support from ground forces who reported critical conditions and heavy enemy opposition from the ridges, the NEW YORK answered with a withering barrage of 14-inch and 5-inch shells, so rapidly that paint on her 5-inch gun barrels blistered and boiled. The Shore Fire Control Officer reported that the firing caused mass exodus of enemy troops and effectively neutralized the area and sent the following message to the ship:

"I want to give you a 'wonderful shooting'. Well done, well done. You were a major factor in taking the hill and you will go down on our list as one of the best ships we ever spotted for."

After further close support rendered the Twenty-Fourth Army Corps from the west, destruction fire by day and harassing fire by night, the NEW YORK joined the Eastern Bombardment Group on 13 April and on that day joined the first group of battleships to render fire support from inside Nakagusuku Wan (now Buckner Bay).

At this time the Tenth Army was re-deploying and making preparations for an all-out offensive to be thrown against the enemy's Siegfried Line on 19 April. For five days preceding, night and day, the NEW YORK pounded out a path for their advance. On 13 and 14 April strong enemy counter-attacks were repelled by fire support ships, including the NEW YORK. On those dates the NEW YORK pounded the strong eastern flank of the enemy line, Conical Hill, and scored sixteen direct hits with 14-inch shells on enemy fortifications on that commanding position.

On 15 April, the NEW YORK celebrated her thirty-first birthday with continued support for the coming Army drive south, unruffled by a suicide plane hit of the previous night. On 17 April, after five days of heavy action against enemy strong points around Shuri, Yonabaru, and on Chinen Peninsula, the NEW YORK again set the pace by joining the first group of fire support ships to stay inside Nakagusuku Wan all night to cover ground forces.

After having played a major part in setting the stage for the Tenth Army offensive, the NEW YORK, on 19 April, moved south and east and joined fast battleships of Task Force 58 to divert enemy attention from the offensive by what has been called "one of the heaviest bombardments ever made in support of amphibious troops," which were making demonstration landings on southeastern beaches.

For the next few days the NEW YORK operated again from waters in the East China Sea, bombarding from the west in support of bitter fighting by the 27th Infantry division east of Machinato airfield and on the approaches to Naha and Shuri. During the night of 20 April the NEW YORK answered with 5-inch starshells an urgent call from ground forces who reported attempted enemy infiltration. On 23 April she pounded Sugarloaf Hill, and while Twenty-Fourth Army Corps troops were attacking Hill 178 she supported them by directing neutralizing fire against near-by Hill 187, scoring 12 direct hits on installations on this key hill guarding Shuri, the bastion of the enemy line.

Following the intense activity of 23-24 April, the NEW YORK received the following messages from units of the Tenth Army:

"Thank you. That was some helluva swell shooting you did this afternoon. Hope we have the pleasure of working with you again sometime."

"Highly pleased with your work today. Results have been very satisfactory and (your planes) turned in a very good performance."

During the first days of May, the NEW YORK furnished close and deep support from the west and the east. While newly deployed First Marines in the west advanced slowly toward Naha and the Twenty-Fourth Corps encountered intense opposition around Shuri, the NEW YORK pounded strong enemy positions on high ground from which most opposition was coming.

From 4 May to 14 May, the NEW YORK worked with the Twenty-Fourth Corps and the Marine III Amphibious Corps from a position inside Nakagusuku Wan. The first few days saw heavy enemy counter-attacks, during which time ground forces were preparing for a second all-out offensive set for 11 May. The NEW YORK contributed to reported heavy enemy casualties and softened enemy defenses by pounding the enemy's eastern stronghold, Yonabaru, with 357 tons of main battery ammunition during the three days commencing 4 May. With no more main battery ammunition on board and none left in the area, the NEW YORK continued its bombardment with its 5-inch guns which had already passed their "gun life" point.

From headquarters 7th Infantry Division the NEW YORK received the following message on 8 May:

"NEW YORK work for us has been excellent and we would like her services again when she has been re-armed."

One day after the start of the 11 May offensive, major enemy resistance in the east was centered on Conical Hill and in the center on Shuri. The NEW YORK's secondary battery furnished close support to the 96th Infantry Division on 12 May in their Conical Hill assault by covering strong enemy positions on high ground just south of Conical Hill. During the following days when the 77th Infantry Division and the Sixth Marine Division were pressing on Shuri against heavy opposition, the NEW YORK moved around the island to the west and took under fire enemy fortifications commanding Shuri and Naha.

On 14 May the NEW YORK received the following message from Commander Battleship Division FIVE, on his departure from the area:

"Good luck to you and your gang. You have left nothing to be desired."

On 25 May, with her supply of 14-inch ammunition replenished after 18 days of unpleasant main battery idleness, the NEW YORK moved in to support final stages of the assault against Shuri. Now working with the First Marine Division, the NEW YORK, during 25-27 May, played a major part in the annihilation of enemy troops evacuating Shuri.

On 26 May, Lt. (jg) R. R. REILAND, flying a NEW YORK spotting plane, observed the first movements of enemy troops from besieged Shuri—the first sizeable troop movements in the Okinawa Campaign. Headquarters First Marine Division, when informed, requested the NEW YORK to open fire with her main battery which she did immediately.

Marine artillery, coached on by Lt. (jg) REILAND, and other fire support ships joined in and inflicted severe casualties on the enemy. For two days the NEW YORK hammered the retreating enemy in their narrow escape corridor.

For its prompt action on 26 May, the NEW YORK received the following message from Headquarters First Marine Division:

"Thank you for the way in which you started firing so fast. We expected to wait about an hour after we requested your fire. It was very good. You boys out there are really doing a good job. Believe me, we really appreciate it very much."

On 27 May, the Commanding General, First Marine Division, sent the following message to the NEW YORK, NEW ORLEANS, and VINCENNES:

"Our congratulations and thanks for prompt response this afternoon when Nips were caught on the road with kimonos down."

As the enemy fled southward during the first days of June, the NEW YORK was there to meet them just as it had been on L-Day. The NEW YORK covered the amphibious landing of the Sixth Marine Division on Naha Peninsula on 4 June and worked in close support of the Sixth Marines against the few remaining Japanese defenses around Naha Airfield. When Japan "wrote off" Okinawa on 7 June, the NEW YORK was smashing its retreating troops just north of Itoman Town.

The NEW YORK departed on 11 June, after close participation in the entire campaign, with this message from Vice Admiral Hill, CTF 31:

"Your departure would bring comfort to a lot of Japs were they alive to know of it. Your accurate gunfire and your aggressive spirit have done much to speed this campaign. Saw you do the same thing 28 years ago in the North Sea. Well done!"

AVIATION UNIT U.S.S. NEW YORK

Performance of the U.S.S. NEW YORK'S aviation unit at Okinawa was truly outstanding. Its accurate spotting, keen observing, and willing and tireless cooperation with this ship, other ships, and ground forces, are to be especially noted. Indicative of its sustained excellent performance during the NEW YORK'S entire stay is the following message received from the Commanding General, First Marine Division, on 21 May:

"The CG wishes to commend the action of Lt. REILAND, U.S.N., on May 17. Com. Gen. 1st Mar. Div. boots action to CO USSNY. Being unable to bring naval gunfire to bear he requested permission to spot field artillery fire. He accurately spotted the fire of the Sixth Battalion of 155 howitzers, destroying two enemy guns. He also gave valuable information of hostile troops and strong points which materially aided the advance of our troops."

INSTRUMENT OF SURRENDER

e, acting by command of and in behalf of the Emperor of Japan, the Japanese Government and the Japanese Imperial General Headquarters, hereby accept the provisions set forth in the declaration issued by the heads of the Governments of the United States, China and Great Britain on 26 July 1945, at Potsdam, and subsequently adhered to by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, which four powers are hereafter referred to as the Allied Powers.

We hereby proclaim the unconditional surrender to the Allied Powers of the Japanese Imperial General Headquarters and of all Japanese armed forces and all armed forces under Japanese control wherever situated.

We hereby command all Japanese forces wherever situated and the Japanese people to cease hostilities forthwith, to preserve and save from damage all ships, aircraft, and military and civil property and to comply with all requirements which may be imposed by the Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers or by agencies of the Japanese Government at his direction.

We hereby command the Japanese Imperial General Headquarters to issue at once orders to the Commanders of all Japanese forces and all forces under Japanese control wherever situated to surrender unconditionally themselves and all forces under their control.

We hereby command all civil, military and naval officials to obey and enforce all proclamations, orders and directives deemed by the Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers to be proper to effectuate this surrender and issued by him or under his authority and we direct all such officials to remain at their posts and to continue to perform their non-combatant duties unless specifically relieved by him or under his authority.

We hereby undertake for the Emperor, the Japanese Government and their successors to carry out the provisions of the Potsdam Declaration in good faith, and to issue whatever orders and take whatever action may be required by the Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers or by any other designated representative of the Allied Powers for the purpose of giving effect to that Declaration.

We hereby command the Japanese Imperial Government and the Japanese Imperial General Headquarters at once to liberate all allied prisoners of war and civilian internees now under Japanese control and to provide for their protection, care, maintenance and immediate transportation to places as directed.

The authority of the Emperor and the Japanese Government to rule the state shall be subject to the Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers who will take such steps as he deems proper to effectuate these terms of surrender.

Though repeatedly subjected to all forms of enemy attack—torpedoes, bombs, coast artillery and suicide planes by the Japanese at Okinawa, coast artillery by the French at Safi, and torpedoes by the Germans at Fedala, North Africa—the NEW YORK was hit only once and then sustained only superficial damage to the ship and two minor personnel casualties. The ship, unbelievably lucky through all its thirty-one years, is one of the three of the thirteen old battleships of the United States Fleet to weather the entire war undamaged.

June

The NEW YORK left Okinawa on 12 June after the island had been declared secured and proceeded to Pearl Harbor, via Ulithi and Eniwetok. At Pearl Harbor she was completely regunned, both 14-inch and 5-inch, the first major ship ever regunned at an advanced base.

Nearly ready for battle again when the war ended, the NEW YORK was sent to San Pedro loaded with 850 passengers ready for discharge and transfer in the United States.

NEW YORK'S ONLY "LADY MARINE" IS SHIP'S TOP KICK

Rated by her shipmates as the most glamorous "Leatherneck" in the Fleet, and the only feminine Marine aboard the U.S.S. NEW YORK, promotion from Platoon Sgt. to First Sgt. came last month to "Lady", the Marine Detachment's German Shepherd mascot.

"Lady's" advancement in rating was ordered by Captain T. A. Durham, the detachment's commanding officer, and elevated her to equal rating with her buddy, First Sgt. A. J. Cappel who has been in the service for ten years. "Lady" was recruited by Sgt. Cappel when she was only a month old and has two years and eight months in the Corps. The two sergeants came aboard the "Old Lady of the Fleet" in October, 1944.

As the aftermath to an affair that was nearly a service scandal, "Lady" had three pups a year ago. One is serving the K9 Corps of the Army. Another is a civilian on Seeing Eye duty, and the third is with Mrs. Cappel on guard at home in Norfolk, Virginia.

U.S.S. NEW YORK AVIATOR FACES JAPANESE FIRING SQUAD AND LIVES TO TELL ABOUT IT

Lieut. W. K. Keller, USN, missing since 28 May 1945, when he was catapulted from the deck of the NEW YORK at Okinawa, was rescued from a Japanese prison camp near Tokyo on 29 August and told a story of mistreatment and near-death.

Lieut. Keller stopped in Honolulu for a short visit with Lieut. R. R. Reiland, former NEW YORK pilot now stationed at Pearl Harbor, and told of his being forced down off Amami Island, 100 miles north of Okinawa, on the night of 28 May, by a shortage of gasoline.

Japanese PT boats surrounded the plane early the next morning, but Lieut. Keller said he had time to destroy all his confidential matter. During the transfer from the plane to one of the boats, Lieut. Keller and his passenger, Lieut. R. S. Mixon, a medical officer attached to the Third Fleet, managed to capsize the plane and it sank.

The two Navy officers were taken to a prison camp on Amami and held there a month before being transferred to the Japanese mainland.

Lieut. Keller told of beatings he and the medical officer took because they would not reveal information regarding our ships, and of the night Lieut. Mixon was dragged from his cell and placed before a firing squad. Lieut. Keller told that was the last time he saw the medic and that Lieut. Mixon's name was not listed among the freed prisoners.

Later Lieut. Keller was placed before a firing squad but proceedings were halted by higher Jap officers who were still seeking information about the American fleet.

The plane was en route to the battleship U.S.S. MISSOURI, to return Lieut. Mixon to his post, and a mix-up in bearings caused the plane to leave its course.

Three months after funeral services were held aboard ship for Lieut. Keller, unofficial word reached the ship that he had been rescued.

Lieut. Keller, a native of Burlingame, California, came to the NEW YORK in October 1944, and flew many reconnaissance flights over Iwo Jima and Okinawa, directing gunfire of the NEW YORK.

ARCHBISHOP SPELLMAN OF NEW YORK RECEIVES FLAG ON VISIT TO U.S.S. NEW YORK AT PEARL HARBOR

Expressing gratitude to the Almighty for Allied victory, the Most Reverend Francis J. Spellman, Archbishop of New York, visited the U.S.S. NEW YORK on 15 August 1945 and accepted an American flag presented to His Excellency by Captain Grayson B. Carter, commanding officer.

In presenting the flag, Captain Carter said, "This flag has no battle scars. It has found its only use in gracing the altar before which Your Excellency in your sermon this morning exhorted us to accept the challenge of peace. We consider this a fitting emblem with which to plead that challenge. We are going to present this flag on behalf of the officers and men of the NEW YORK to Archbishop Spellman in the hope that it will never see the destruction and bloodshed of war."

In acceptance, the Archbishop replied, "With gratitude I receive this flag from the ship which bears the name of the great state from which I come. Many of you come from that state. All of you come from that great country, the United States—and that is our power."

"To all of you on this ship, which has a history second to none, I promise you I shall follow Captain Carter's words and keep this flag as a symbol of things American and of peace. I shall place it in the Cathedral of Saint Patrick in New York. There let it remind us forever that the challenge of peace is just as great and important as that of war. We have another battle ahead of us, the battle for peace."

Standing in the shadow of the great ship's 14-inch guns, the crew, accompanied by the ship's band, added a spirited note to the ceremony by saluting the Archbishop with a lusty rendition of "The Sidewalks of New York" as a tribute to his home city. His Excellency smiled and joined in the song.

The first enlisted man the prelate met was Edward F. Spellman, watertender second-class, who lives in Boston, former home of the Archbishop. His Excellency and the sailor, however, were not able to establish family relationship.

September 1945

The NEW YORK made one more cruise to Pearl Harbor to pick up 1,200 high point Navy enlisted men and officers and return them to the East Coast where she was slated to be for Navy Day. She arrived in New York after almost a month underway on 19 October 1945 and was well received by the City of New York.

DINAH SHORE GREETES NEW YORK AS SHIP BECOMES HOLLYWOOD HOST

Amidst the strains of "California, Here I Come", the NEW YORK sailed into San Pedro (California) Harbor the morning of 9 September 1945 to be greeted by Dinah Shore and to begin an eleven-day visit which brought some of filmdom's brightest stars to the decks of the "Old Lady Of The Fleet".

As the NEW YORK sided into her berth in the harbor, the first battleship ever to moor alongside a pier in that harbor, officers and men of the ship and 826 veterans returning from the Pacific aboard the "Old Lady" listened with rapt attention to a beautiful voice floating across the still waters singing, "You'd Be So Nice To Come Home To". None of the hundreds assembled topside on the ship knew that the beautiful young lady dressed in white and singing from the pier was Dinah Shore, not until they heard, "Hello, Fellows, this is Dinah Shore." A cheer burst from the lined decks of the "Old Lady" and oral requests were yelled to the most popular singer of G.I.'s everywhere.

During her stay in San Pedro Harbor, the NEW YORK extended her hospitality to such well-known film players as Randolph Scott, star of "China Skies", Donna Reed, whose latest picture is "They Were Expendable", and Madame Marie Ouspenskiya, currently filming "Concerto", Madame Ouspenskiya, formerly of the Moscow Art Theatre and one of the outstanding character actresses in the world today, visited the ship with Mary Gordon, she of the Scotch brogue who is famed for her mother voice. Starlets Angela Greene of Warner Brothers, and Betty Hill of Paramount also tasted the NEW YORK's hospitality.

Joan Leslie's visit to the NEW YORK was postponed when the ship received unexpected sailing orders to depart for Pearl Harbor one day ahead of schedule.

Jose Iturbi, Joan Leslie, Betty Brodel, Madame Marie Ouspenskiya, Angela Green, Estelle Taylor, Mary Gordon, Marie Hare, Raymond Hatton, Bill Neff, Betty Hill, Peter Helmers, Benson Fong, Makail Rasumny, Chill Wills, and Mrs. Arthur Freid were among the motion picture stars and starlets that greeted the NEW YORK.

It was the first time the Canteen had ever honored a single ship, though it has played host to over a million servicemen during its three-year life. It was also the first time officers were ever invited to the Canteen.

February 1946

The NEW YORK was sent to Philadelphia to be prepared for Operation Crossroads, and it was on this ship that the Navy laid most of the groundwork of ideas that would apply to all the target vessels. In Philadelphia the ship was across the pier from the ex-German heavy cruiser Prinz Eugen, also assigned to the Crossroads target fleet, and whom she had heard of before in the days of the Neutrality Patrol in the North Atlantic when the Eugen together with the German battleship Bismark were threatening the safety of the shipping lanes used by United States ships.

On 4 March 1946, the NEW YORK proceeded out from Philadelphia alone on what will probably be her last cruise, en route to Panama, Pearl Harbor and Bikini Atoll in the Marshall Islands for the atom bomb tests on naval surface craft.

L'AVENIR
("The Future")

Who knows?

The history of the NEW YORK reflects great honor, glory and pride to all who trod her decks. With the coming of the "Atomic" age, this gallant ship has not been denied the opportunity to serve again. "Greater love hath no man than he who lays down his life for a friend," and truly the NEW YORK is called on, this time, to—perhaps—pay the "Supreme Sacrifice" in the operation "CROSSROADS",—in the atomic bomb tests off Bikini Atoll.

It is not believed possible that man-made machinery of war will withstand the devastating blasts of the atomic bomb. It will be indeed a severe test, and no more vigorous resistance could possibly be encountered than within the age-worn, truly-tried decks of this gallant ship—"The Old Lady Of The Fleet."

In this ship—as in the hearts of the men who served her—is welded a heritage that will withstand the ravages of time, to the end that—if there be another NEW YORK—its Ship's Company will hold ever high—the Torch that has been handed them—for COUNTRY and for GOD.

"Eternal Father, strong to save,
Whose arm doth bind the restless wave,
Who bidd'st the mighty ocean deep
Its own appointed limits keep."

OLDEST AFLOAT

With the coming of the Atomic Age, this gallant ship was given the opportunity to serve again and in the bomb tests at Bikini, she survived while the USS Arkansas was sent to the bottom, leaving the USS New York the oldest U. S. Battleship afloat.

Leaving San Francisco on 1 May 1946, she sailed to Bikini via Pearl Harbor and Kwajalein under the command of Captain L. H. Bibby, a handful of experienced officers and men and a green crew. She was subjected to both atomic bombs, the air burst of 1 July 1946 and the underwater explosion of 25 July 1946. And in tribute to her original builders and to the Navy men who kept her in trim for 32 years, she stayed afloat.

On 28 August 1946, her final chapter was written when she was officially decommissioned.

In this ship—as in the hearts of the men who served her—is welded a heritage that will withstand the ravages of time, to the end that—if there be another NEW YORK—its Ship's Company will hold ever high—the Torch that has been handed them—for COUNTRY and for GOD.

"Eternal Father, strong to save,
Whose arm doth bind the restless wave,
Who bidd'st the mighty ocean deep
Its own appointed limits keep."

U. S. Navy
