The Vision

- - - - -
J. Faure

Arranged by L. B. MARSHALL

In visions all divine I heard
Sounds of celestial harmony,
As of hosts near the heav'nly throne
Praising the Lord who dwells on high.
Loud the surging anthems rose,
Lifting my soul upon its buoyant wing,
Till I could see the pearly gates unclosed,
And my raptur'd eyes beheld the King!

O glorious Vision! Immortal Song!
Adoring Angels thy strains prolong,
Immortal Song! O sound again! Anthem celestial!
Again thy chant! Singers divine!
O teach me thy numbers, and bear me on to glory,
And bear me on to glory on wings of melody like thine!

The clouds like incense from the earth
Rising above this vision rare
Touched by beams from the radiant sun,
Pictured a scene beyond compare.
On the steps of the heav'nly throne
Worshipping hosts assembl'd to rejoice,
Pour'd forth a strain to earthly ears unknown,
Like the sound of one supernal voice!

The Pilgrims' Chorus

From "Tannhauser," Richard Wagner

Once more with joy, oh ! my home I may meet ;
Once more, ye fair flowery meadows, I greet ye ;
My pilgrim staff henceforth may rest,
Since heav'n's sweet peace is within my breast.
In joy or grief, in hope or fear,
When danger presses and distress,
Behold a refuge ! ever near
To heal, to comfort, and to bless.
O Holy source of sweet mercy o'erflowing,
Upon the pilgrim Thy graces bestowing,
With grateful heart shall I adore
And serve Thee, Lord, for evermore !
Hallelujah ! Hallelujah ! for evermore.

Class Ode

Words by MYRTLE F. SMART

Music by FRANCES P. ELDRIDGE

We have walked life's road together, we have labored side by side,
And the sunshine and the shadow we have shared ;
We have climbed the hill of knowledge with the help of those who guide
And behind us lies the road o'er which we fared.
Now in front the future calls us, calls on us to do our part
In the contest where we each must do and die :
But it stretches strange and varied, and our ways will lie apart ;
And tonight we bid our classmates sad goodbye.

For some the triple Fates prepare a far-off foreign home ;
And some the West may lure with mine and plain,
Or perhaps the pathless ocean with its restless fret and foam ;
But still more will stay fast bound by friendship's chain -
Yet wherever chance may lead us we will battle for the right
And will bravely strive to conquer wrong and fraud ;
And be this our steadfast purpose as we struggle toward the light,
To serve in truth our nation and our God.
