Words by Henry Payson Dowst.

Music by Agnes Hope Pillsbury.

The hour has come and now we stand
To give our simple parting song;
To clasp each well-known friendly hand,
Then scatter in the wide world's throng.

Yet on the threshold would we stay
One moment, and into the past,
While mem'ry briefly holds its sway,
One fleeting glance in farewell cast.

While life's diverging paths we tread,
While onward still we press our way,
Bright shines the sun of hope o'erhead
To cheer us with its genial ray.
