The Bangor Mechanic Association Fund

The Bangor Mechanic Association Fund is one of nine funds from the income of which, and an annual appropriation by the City of Bangor, the Bangor Public Library receives its support. From the founding of the Bangor Public Library, in 1883, until 1920, when the second of the great book funds of the library was received, part of the income of the Bangor Mechanic Association Fund was applied to the purchase of books. Such books were identified by the Bangor Mechanic Association Fund bookplate, shown on the previous page. The bookplate was designed and engraved by Sidney Lawton Smith, who, long before his death in 1929, became the dean of American bookplate designers. Three more of Smith's bookplates for the Bangor Public Library are illustrated on the final pages of this report.

Seven of the library's nine bookplates were designed by Smith. The other two were designed by Elisha Brown Bird, likewise a leader in the field of bookplate art.

The donors of funds whose income is used for the general expenses of the library, rather than for books, and who, therefore, cannot be remembered by bookplates, are remembered by a bronze plaque, bearing their names, affixed to the wall of the library building just inside the main entrance.

Report of the Librarian

January 22, 1946

To the Board of Managers of the Bangor Public Library:

The phenomenal opportunity to buy books that the Bangor Public Library enjoys by reason of its generous endowment specified for that purpose imposes on the management corresponding responsibilities. The two chief responsibilities are to use the books well and to care for them well.

Concerning Bangor's use of books it is pertinent to note that our library, in this city of 29,822 inhabitants, contains 236,562 books. In size of book collection we are about the equal of such cities as Akron, Atlanta, Houston, New Orleans, Omaha, San Diego, and Youngstown, which have from seven to thirteen times as many residents as Bangor. The home use of books per individual per year in Bangor is 10.61, as compared with from 2.88 to 5.92 in the seven cities whose book collections correspond with ours. The per cent of Bangor's population registered as library users is 61, as compared with from 10 to 35 in the other cities. Bangor's books are well used.

Because the foregoing figures are gratifying does not, however, justify or incline us to cease expanding our library services so far as our means permit. The budget for 1946 contains provision for two more staff members. Part of their time will be used in expanding the public services of the library and part, in doing the additional work made necessary by the 36% growth of our collection in the past ten years.

As I have suggested in previous years, a bookmobile might reach enough more readers to increase Bangor's home use of books by at least one-fourth. A bookmobile is an auto truck furnished with a special, heated body, fitted with interior shelves for some 1,000 to 1,200 books. It could be in charge of a young man on short-term appointment directly after graduation from a library school. He would act both as driver and as librarian. To lend books the bookmobile would make one-hour or two-hour stops, on regular weekly schedule, at neighborhood stores, grange halls, and other gathering places in the outlying residential areas and in the rural areas within city limits. Our budget does not now permit such an acquisition, but I seriously urge the desirability of trying to include a bookmobile in our future plans.

As to housing our books, it must be said that, though there is hardly another library anywhere built with such foresight for future growth, we should within six years seek means to build an extension to our present book stack. Such an addition, to take the form of a wing or ell on the rear of our present building, would make a dignified and permanently useful memorial should any donor or testator be interested.

There is room for such an addition on the library lot.

Our stack room is capable of containing shelves for 275,000 books. When the building was opened in 1913 shelves for a little less than half of the full capacity of the stack room were erected. In 1925 the shelving was increased from one-half to five-eighths of full capacity; in 1929, to three-quarters; and, in 1937, to seven-eighths, or 240,625 books. Our average annual gain for the past ten years has been 6,240 books. Continuing this rate in 1946 we shall have 242,802 books by the end of the year, exceeding our present shelf capacity.

Two facts have, until now, prevented the present shelves from becoming impossibly crowded: that about one-quarter of our collection is at all times in use outside the building and that we do continually weed the collection. Nevertheless, as capacity has been approached, the problem of handling new books has become constantly harder. Often, when a set is bought or ten new books on a single subject are added, two or more full ranges of books have to be moved to make room for the new books in their proper place.

In 1946, now that materials are again to be had, it will be well to erect the final one-half floor of stacks within the present walls. We can do this from such savings as we have been able to make from the income of the only one of our funds that may be used for the purpose.

The new half-floor within the present roof will take care of the growth for about five years. After that an addition for more book stack will become imperative. It is not too early to begin planning for this.

A four-story addition, the same height as the present stack, with ground area forty-five by fifty feet, would provide space for about 200,000 additional books, or for thirty-two years at the present rate of expansion. Its erection would also permit the installation of an elevator that would serve equally the new stack and the old.

To turn from planning for the future to outlining the work of the year 1945, it is interesting to note that for the second successive year since the low point of 1943, home use of books has increased slightly. Bangor's total home use of library books in 1945 was 316,655. This is 23.9% below the peak year of 1940, when 416,029 books were taken home. The variation between the peak of 1940 and the low of 1943 was 25.3%. The increase in 1945 was principally in children's books and in adult non-fiction from the Central Library. There were small declines in borrowing through the Music Branch and the Extension Department. Borrowing of books by fee-paying non-residents by mail increased 25% in the year and reached the highest point ever attained.

During 1945 we distributed books at 148 locations throughout Bangor: school rooms, hospitals, residential institutions, other libraries, and our own central library and two branches.

In our information department, work, as measured by questions requiring research, increased 15% over the year before. Reserves of books for home use increased 12%. The gain here was principally in the months since the end of the war. These are straws which may indicate that as Bangor's soldiers and sailors continue to return and now that there is gasoline in every auto, the use of the library is likely to rise rapidly to the level of the pre-war years.

Pages 17 through 25 of this report contain full statistics of operation, arranged in the same form as for the past nine years and so easily comparable.

Respectfully submitted,

L. FELIX RANLETT,
Librarian.

I have examined the accounts of Harry D. Benson, Treasurer of the Bangor Public Library, for the year ended December 31, 1945. The cash income and expenditures of the year were found to be properly accounted for, and the cash on hand as of December 31, 1945, was confirmed by certification obtained by me directly from the Merchants National Bank of Bangor.

The securities owned by the Library are held for safekeeping by the Merchants National Bank of Bangor. They were produced for my inspection by an officer of that bank; all were accounted for and found to be in proper order.
